ATTACKED BY TWO GERMANS

Machine, Fired on from Rear, Fell in Flames, According to One Report.

PATROL SEEKS HIM IN VAIN

PARIS, July 17.—Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, youngest son of the former President, has been killed in an air fight, the semi-official Havas News Agency reports. His machine fell into the enemy lines, it is stated.

Lieutenant Roosevelt was last seen in combat on Sunday morning with two enemy airplanes about ten miles inside the German lines in the Château-Thierry sector. He started out with a patrol of thirteen American machines. They encountered seven Germans and were chasing them back when two of them turned on Lieutenant Roosevelt.

Reports of the fight state that the Germans appeared to be shooting at the Lieutenant from the rear, the three machines being close together. Then one of the machines was seen tumbling through the clouds, and a patrol which went in search of Lieutenant Roosevelt returned without a trace of him. He appeared to be fighting up to the last moment.

One account of the combat states that the machine caught fire before it began to fall. Another report says that Roosevelt's plane was not in flames when it went down.

Philip Roosevelt, Quentin's cousin, witnessed the air battle in the vicinity of Château-Thierry in which Quentin was engaged and saw the machine fall, but did not know until later that the airplane was that of his cousin, Le Journal says today.

LONDON, July 17.—Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, Colonel Roosevelt's youngest son, who had been attached to the American line forces on the Marne front, was killed at Château-Thierry July 14, says a dispatch from Paris to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The dispatch says he was returning from a patrol fight when he was attacked by a German squadron. It was seen that Roosevelt suddenly lost control of his machine, having probably received a mortal wound.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 17, 9 A. M.—Nothing has yet been heard of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, who has been missing since Sunday.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The War Department late tonight still was without official information from France regarding the death of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, who was reported by the Havas Agency as having been shot down behind the German lines when engaging two German airplanes.

It was assumed that a report would be made in General Pershing's communiqué for yesterday, which has been delayed in transmission.

"Quentin's Mother and I Are Very Glad He Got to the Front," Colonel Says.

The only statement which Colonel Theodore Roosevelt had to make yesterday in regard to the death of his son Quentin, was the following:

"Quentin's mother and I are very glad that he got to the front and had a chance to render some service to his country and to show the stuff there was in him before his fate befell him."

Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt had been prepared to some extent for the news of the death of their youngest son because of a press cable message, which was received Tuesday night, as follows:

"Watch Sagamore Hill in event of ——— [deleted by censor.]"

This was referred to Colonel Roosevelt, to learn if he had any message which would give a meaning to the dispatch. The Colonel studied it at his home after 11 o'clock on Tuesday night and came to the conclusion that it

COPENHAGEN, July 17.—A special dispatch to the Extrabladet from Stockholm says that eight persons in that city have been stricken with Asiatic cholera.

The scourge is also raging at Saratov.

LONDON, July 17.—About 500 persons die of cholera daily in Petrograd, according to travelers arriving in Copenhagen, says a dispatch from the Danish capital to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

At Saratov thousands of persons are suffering from the disease. The malady has spread to Finland.

ENEMY TROOPS SURPRISED

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 17.—Against the Germans in the present drive the French and Americans are using mustard gas. This is the gas the Hun is most fond of using against the allied troops since he perfected it last November. Evidence of its effect comes from German sources. Captured documents show that our use of mustard gas has brought a rehabilitation of the German precautions against gas, and they will study to find out what the English, French, and Americans have been doing to guard against it.

These documents agree that the French and American use of mustard gas has been very effective. One German order issued to the army in front of the Americans northwest of Château-Thierry says that one attack produced 500 casualties. The order states:

"Symptoms of sickness make us suppose that the enemy is using a new gas which resembles our 'yellow cross.'"

Discussing the attack with the new gas, the order says:

"The enemy had completely ceased firing gas shells for several days. The troops, it seems, had thought attacks by gas were entirely abandoned in this mobile warfare. Notwithstanding instructions and warnings concerning the gas service, they became careless and did not have the means of protection at hand when the attack commenced. This mistake explains the increased number of sick."

Further on the order says:

"This gas seems to have, even in diluted form, more harmful effects than the gas contained up to the present time in shells used by the field artillery. Men were often surprised by the gas attacks before they were able to protect themselves by the use of their masks. But neither in this case nor when they were surprised by bombardments of large-calibre shells or bombs were the casualties as high as those reported by the above [deleted] divisions."

An addendum to the order by the commanding General says:

"Any failure to enforce gas discipline should be severely punished, as is done by the French. If not, one must expect considerable losses among the fighting troops as a result of the next gas bombardment."

Another German order says:

"Following a gas attack of the enemy against the [deleted] Bavarian Division, it has been established that gas poisoning still occurred among those who took off their masks after wearing them for twelve hours. It is evident that we have to deal with a new gas similar to our 'yellow cross' mustard gas. Appropriate protective measures will again be taken."

Other orders call for the establishment of new and rigid precautions against gas. Others direct elaborate precautions against using water in which may be mustard gas. All this shows that the boche finds his own medicine a bitter dose.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 17.—The battle is proceeding this afternoon to an ultra-Wagnerian accompaniment of forked and sheet lightning and rolling thunder, with intermittent rain showers.

Tragic irony dogs the initiators of the art of bombarding noncombatants. It is no exaggeration to say that the enemy losses are enormous. On long stretches of the front the wide fields are littered with German corpses, a horrible spectacle.

On the north of the Marne the French today had to sustain a very heavy attack from the Châtillon Valley against the Bois du Roi and other wooded hills between Reuil and Cuchery. This was checked.

Foe's Marne Positions Vulnerable.

While the outlying spurs of the Mountain of Rheims are thus threatened from the north and west, the situation of the enemy astride the Marne cannot be called comfortable. It will be remembered how on the third day of June, in his offensive south of Montdidier, General Foch took the opportunity of striking out against such a vulnerable flank, and how his success closed that chapter of von Hutier's career.

The enemy this morning broke through at Oeuilly on the Marne and seized Montvoisin, which is seven miles west of Epernay. He was at once counterattacked and driven back from this position. The Germans have retaken Bourdonnerie Farm, and hard fighting is going on here near Comblizy, as well as in Courton Wood, north of the Marne.

On the Champagne front Perthes, lost for a time yesterday morning, was recaptured by French chasseurs, and from Prunay, which was a part of the first French positions, a strong attack toward the Vesle at Beaumont was completely broken. In brief, the old front is maintained, and the efforts of Generals Fritz von Below and von Mudra are restricted to local objectives. As a general operation the offensive on this side has fallen to pieces.

In two days, though heavily outnumbered, the army of Champagne has broken as formidable an onslaught as any allied army can have to meet, and it faces the future with the high confidence born of such a test.

Defense Zone Proved Worth.

It is largely because of the zone of defenses several miles deep that the offensive has been promptly arrested. On Sunday night the French gun began their counterfire, as I have reported, actually before the enemy started his preparatory bombardment. Châlons, twenty miles behind the French lines, has long been made unpleasant by visits of German airmen. Just after midnight Monday morning a large shell fell on the city, and, as if this were the signal, the northern horizon was immediately lit up with flashes of

PARIS, July 17.—"We regret being unable on this occasion to follow the counsels of our masters, the French, but the American flag has been forced to retire. This is unendurable, and none of our soldiers would understand their not being asked to do whatever is necessary to re-establish (remedy?) a situation which is humiliating to us and unacceptable to our country's honor. We are going to counterattack."

This was a message sent by an American General in command of American forces south of the Marne on Monday afternoon after the Germans had succeeded in forcing the Americans back toward Conde-en-Brie.

The French commander informed the American General that the early German success could not have any great effect on the fate of the battle; that it was understood perfectly that after hard fighting the Americans had slowly retired, and that it was not expected that they immediately launch a counterattack. He added that a counterattack could be postponed without risk, and it might be better to give the American troops an hour's rest.

Immediately after the American General sent the foregoing message, which is quoted by the correspondent of the Matin, the Americans launched their counterattack and the lost ground was soon recovered, with an additional half mile taken from the Germans for good measure.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 17.—Today's attacks by the Germans have been limited and abortive. They give the impression of pure pique, as if the German high command were saying, "We know you'll break your faces, but you must do it just to teach you what it means not to carry out our plans."

As an example of the conduct of the outpost units on the first day of the battle one of the largest battalions strongly held an advanced position all day, sending priceless information every few minutes. They not only retarded the whole enemy operation in that region for two hours but repelled assaults with great slaughter.

In the late afternoon they blew up their defenses and actually cut their way back, though reduced, bringing their machine guns, wounded and some prisoners. The division General wanted to decorate the Major commanding them with the Legion of Honor on the battlefield, but the officer insisted on returning to the front line.

The retirement of the main forces from the outpost zone was executed so well that the enemy did not suspect it and wasted a deluge of projectiles.

The bombardment began at 12:10 o'clock. The exact moment that had been anticipated was signaled by a twelve-inch shell on Châlons, thirty kilometres back. The attack was delivered along the whole front by some twenty-five divisions, fifteen forward and ten supporting—more than three times the number of defenders in the line. Everywhere it was shattered with appalling loss.

At one point fifty German dead were counted in a hundred-yard boyau and wire entanglement. Many places were festooned with bodies. Our losses were incredibly low.

Naturally, in every Allied unit the morale became enormously high and the men were in better fighting trim than before the battle. The enemy was correspondingly depressed by the wreck of his ambitious plans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 17, (9 A. M.)—The American troops this morning are holding all the gains they made yesterday against the Germans on the Marne front between Château-Thierry and Dormans. From Château-Thierry to Courtemont the enemy has been completely thrown back across the Marne, and counterattacks by the French and Americans yesterday and last night pushed the Germans back on the river to a line running through Savigny, Bois de Condé, north of Chezy; Ferme-des-Clos-Milon to Nesle-le-Repons.

Despite violent attacks thrown against them and bloody fighting, the American troops have suffered no reverse. Against the furious German onslaught they have held fast with a tenacity which evoked unbounded enthusiasm and praise in the French ranks.

I asked a French high officer last night what he thought of the conduct of the American troops fighting east of Château-Thierry. He replied:

"They have covered themselves with glory. They are glorious."

That officer knew, for the success of his rôle in the battle depended largely on what the Americans did.

To comprehend what the Americans accomplished it should be understood that on Sunday we held a line along the Marne from Château-Thierry to just west of Jaulgonne. Since then we have thrown more troops into the battle, so that from a point due south of Jaulgonne to a point just west of Nesle-le-Repons we are fighting with the French. When the Germans launched their drive on Monday morning it was with the objective of a line sweeping from Château-Thierry through Courboin, through Montigny, and thence south to Epernay and Châlons, the grand objective. Montigny was to have been reached on the first day through the Americans.

Guard Division Destroyed.

It was after extraordinarily vicious artillery preparation that the Germans got troops across the Marne at ten points between Château-Thierry and Dormans. Against the Americans who were then holding the south bank of the Marne up through Mezy the crack German [deleted] Guard Division got across about 15,000 men by the use of canvas boats. The greater number crossed at two places near Fossoy and Mezy. Between 3 o'clock and 10 o'clock the Germans advanced against the Americans to a line running through Fossoy and Crezancy. When the Americans counterattacked about noon the Germans were thrown back and at midnight no Germans were on this side of the Marne up to Jaulgonne. Reliable reports say that the Americans practically destroyed the guard division that was sent against them. Hundreds were killed while trying to get back across the Marne. It is estimated that the Americans killed or wounded 7,000 and our prisoners numbered 1,[illegible]0, most of whom were taken by three companies of our troops—750 men.

Meanwhile the German line to our right had swept down from Courtemont around south of the Bois de Condé and south of St. Agnan around to Comblizy. The French retook St. Agnan and La Chapelle Monday afternoon with our troops in the second line. A counterattack by the Germans, launched at the same time of another smaller French attack, gave him these two places again. This was the situation yesterday afternoon when the French, reinforced by Americans, launched another attack at 1 o'clock.

In addition to going ahead with the French, our troops moved east on the west of the German flank. By 2 o'clock our combined forces had retaken La Chapelle and St. Agnan, as well as the important Hill 241 and Hill 223. The Americans drove the Germans back from the south edge of the Bois de Condé over the hill commanding the woods to the north side. A little later we took Chezy and Montlevon, and then continued our advance. The total gain of terrain was about two kilometers in depth on a front of eight kilometers. But the possession of the hills was more important. A considerable number of prisoners were taken. Those resting in the hands of the American units attacking west of the German flank number 345. The entire counterattack was a success.

The American troops fighting in yesterday's attack never before had been in battle. Their splendid performance came after a day and a half of heavy shelling with high explosives and gas, which they stood well. Their spirit was never broken.

Surrounded, Fought Way Out.

The stuff that American soldiers are made of was shown in the case of a company led by Captain Mackey. In the fighting in the Bois De Condé this company of 250 men was surrounded by the enemy and reported captured. Three hours later Captain Mackey showed up with thirty-eight men. They had refused to be captured, although surrounded, and had fought their way back against great odds.

Another story of heroism is that of a platoon of Americans who were in Mezy when the Germans got across the river. When their comrades withdrew they stayed in the cellars in Mezy, where they placed machine guns in such positions that the Germans could not dislodge them. When the Americans got back into Mezy late on Monday night this platoon, without food, but with plenty of "pep," was still on the job. They had played havoc with the ranks of retreating Germans.

The only trouble the commanders had with the American troops was that they did not know when to retreat. One platoon did not get or did not heed orders to withdraw, and holding on, became surrounded. Then they cut their way out. Half of them got back.

German failures against the Americans mean that the enemy has been greatly handicapped in his efforts to get to Epernay and Chalons. With the Americans holding as they are, the Germans will have to drive a much sharper and more dangerous salient than if our men had not held so well. Besides, the American successes give the Allies possession of the series of hills south of the Marne and just east of Château-Thierry, possession of which by the Germans would mean a serious menace to the allied line in this section. This same sort of service was performed by the 2d Division in holding Bois de Belleau and Vaux and Bouresches.

The Germans are now getting a taste of their own medicine in the artillery fire from our side. Prisoners say it is exceedingly difficult to maintain communication across the Marne because of the accuracy of our fire on their pontoon bridges. It was believed that the Germans has a mass manoeuvre of forty-four divisions—660,000 men—with which to make the drive, but it now appears that they are using between sixty and seventy divisions. I understand that most of these have been put into the effort of the last two days. Certainly the German effort of yesterday was not so strong as on Monday.

Crack Troops Very Young.

Men who have examined prisoners all through the war tell me the morale of the Kaiser's crack divisions is lower than ever, mark-

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

PARIS, July 17.

Night Report.—The battle continued today with stubbornness along the whole front. West of Rheims, despite his efforts, the enemy was not able to make further advance. Our troops, by their heroic resistance and incessant counterattacks, checked, with alternative advance and recoil, the thrust of the enemy.

South of the Marne the fighting proceeded on the wooded slopes north of St. Agnan and La Chapelle-Monthodon. Very spirited actions north of Comblizy and Festigny enabled us to hold the enemy on the southern outskirts of Bouquigny and Chataignières. East of Oeuilly the Germans succeeded in regaining a footing in Montvoisin.

Between the Marne and Rheims the battle continued north of Reuil and in the Bois du Roi, which the Germans penetrated and which our troops defended foot by foot.

The Forest of Courton likewise was the theatre of violent engagements. The enemy holds the line west of Nanteuil-la-Fosse.

Pourcy, the objective of powerful attacks, several times renewed, could not be reached by the Germans. A brilliant counterattack by the Italian troops west of this village drove back the enemy into the Ardre Valley. Numerous enemy dead before our lines testify to the heavy losses suffered by our adversaries.

The situation is without change in the sector of Vrigny and southwest of Rheims.

East of Rheims we broke up an attack between Beaumont-sur-Vesles and Sillery.

Day Report.—South of the Marne new German forces pushed forward and attacked yesterday and last evening the heights north of St. Agnan and La Chapelle-Monthodon. The enemy succeeded in penetrating into the Bourdonnerie Farm, and the battle continues with violence on the slopes and woods immediately south of this point.

Further east, despite very vigorous attacks, the French held the enemy in the southern outskirts of Bouquigny Wood and at the village of Nesles. The Germans likewise launched a powerful attack in the direction of Montvoisin, on the south side of the Marne, southwest of Venteuil, but were thrown back from this locality by a powerful counterattack by the French.

Between the Marne and Rheims violent combats developed in Courton Wood. A German attack in the region of Vrigny broke down completely.

East of Rheims German local attacks were fruitless, notably in the region of Prunay. A renewed attack by the enemy in the direction of Beaumont, on the south side of the Vesle, southwest of Prunay, suffered a sanguinary repulse.

The French positions throughout have been maintained intact.

BERLIN, July 17, via London.

Day Report.—The fighting did not revive until evening. We captured prisoners in reconnoitring thrusts southwest of Ypres. South and west of Hebuterne the enemy renewed his attacks unsuccessfully.

There have been local attacks in the Savières region and west of Château-Thierry.

Southwest of Courtemont (on the Marne front, east of Château-Thierry) we pushed our lines forward as far as the Surmelin sector. The enemy is directing violent counterattacks with strong forces against our front on the south bank of the Marne. His attacks broke down before our lines with the heaviest of losses.

After bitter fighting on the north bank of the Marne the successes of the first storming day were extended. After warding off French counterattacks we pushed on after the enemy as far as the heights north of Venteuil and fought our way through the Bois de Rodemat.

On both sides of the Ardre we threw back the enemy on the Mountain of Rheims between Mantenal [Nanteuil?] and north of Pourcy.

The situation east of Rheims is unchanged. We have held the enemy line under a heavy fire and improved our positions on the Roman Road and on Suippes. Northwest of Massiges we captured some fortified heights.

The number of prisoners captured has increased to 18,000. Further, thirty-seven enemy airplanes and two captive balloons were shot down yesterday over the battlefield.

LONDON, July 17.—The third day of the fifth German offensive has been characterized by stubborn fighting along the whole front, and ends with German gains of territory which at only one point was as much as a mile and a half. This was southwest of Rheims.

Paris reports that east and west of Rheims most of the enemy attacks were broken up, and that the whole Champagne line remains intact.

East of Rheims the principal German attempt was made between Beaumont-sur-Vesle and Sillery. It failed utterly.

The Mountain of Rheims, south of the Cathedral City, was the object of fierce German assaults which enabled the enemy to push forward on a six-mile front through wooded country to a distance of about a mile and a half, the French, defending the ground foot by foot, retiring toward the mountain.

The village of Pourcy, on the northern edge of the Forest of the Mountain of Rheims, was repeatedly the target of powerful German attacks, none of which succeeded. West of Pourcy Italian troops counterattacked brilliantly and drove the enemy back into the Ardre Valley.

Southeast of this sector and below the Marne the Germans regained a footing in Montvoisin, east of Oeuilly, after having been driven from the village in an earlier counterattack.

In the region to the west of this the Germans last night threw new troops into the battle, but the French by spirited actions north of Comblizy and Festigny held their assailants on the southern outskirts of Bouquigny and Chataignières. The Germans, however, succeeded in penetrating La Bourdonnerie, to the north of St. Agnan. Here Americans and French in co-operation are holding the enemy well.

Berlin reports "the successes of the first storming day extended" north of the Marne, recording the gains in the direction of the Mountain of Rheims admitted by the French.

The total of allied prisoners taken is now said to be 18,000.

Thirty-seven allied airplanes and two captive balloons, it is said, were shot down yesterday.

FIGHTING ON MARNE SLOWED UP BY RAIN

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 17, (Associated Press.)—A downpour of rain over the battle zones between Château-Thierry and Dormans on the Marne front has served to slow up the operations since early this morning.

The Germans today were throwing their utmost effort northward of the Marne in the direction of Nanteuil-la-Fosse, which fell momentarily into their hands, but shortly afterward was retaken by the French in a brilliant counterattack. The situation is generally regarded as excellent for the Allies, who, instead of having to meet an offensive on a grand scale, now are being forced to ward off only local attacks.

South of the Marne numerous German attacks were repulsed, while the Allies in counterattacks regained some ground north of St. Agnan.

Among the allied soldiers the feeling prevails that they have regained the ascendency over the enemy, and they go forward with the greatest confidence when ordered to carry out counterattacks, even when their numbers are considerably smaller than those of the enemy.

In the neighborhood of Fossoy, in the river bend district, the Americans further improved their positions today. Fighting continued throughout the day in the region of the counterattack begun by the American forces yesterday.

At 8 o'clock tonight there had been no further changes on the sectors of the battlefront held by the American troops or those where they are fighting with their allies. The fighting continues sporadically throughout the Marne region, and the artillery activity is rather heavy all along the line.

Many Germans between the railroad and the south bank of the river appear to have made good their escape to the north bank at several points in the course of the night.

The American troops co-operating with the French at a point where counterattacks were carried out yesterday were attacked again this morning by the enemy, who by reason of the nature of the ground was able to make slight gains at some places, while at others the Americans again pushed their way back.

The lines here have been wavering back and forth for the past twenty-four hours, and the result of the entire operation is indefinite.

In the region of Vaux, west of Château-Thierry, conditions today were normal. The Germans there were lying low after the two minor but nevertheless important defeats they had suffered there on two consecutive days.

East of Rheims the American troops in their sector are holding all their positions. In some localities periods of quiet equaling that preceding the offensive prevail, but there appear to be signs of further activity.

When the German artillery preparation started on the night of the fourteenth the flashes from thousands of guns were so vivid that they lighted up the streets of Châlons, nearly twenty miles from the front. The French replied with an equally powerful fire, and everything for many miles trembled until dawn, when the German infantry came over.

The advancing waves on the east of Rheims were of great density, giving the hundreds of French 75s a point-blank target. At the same time small centres of resistance, composed of French advanced posts, opened fire with machine guns, which did terrific execution.

These isolated detachments held up the enemy masses for several hours, giving ample time for their comrades guarding the line resistance to organize and bring into play all their means of defense. Then they retired slowly, at times being compelled to fight strong bodies of the enemy, who had succeeded in passing their positions.

Lieutenant Tranchard, with twenty-five men, was caught between the French and German barrages and remained fighting half the day. He then cut his way through the enemy's lines at the point of the bayonet and received the Legion of Honor on the field.

The perfect execution of General Gouraud's defense plans prevented the enemy from making a breach at any point on this sector, although during twenty-four hours the German Crown Prince sent three incessantly renewed waves of his best troops forward in the determination to get through to Châlons.

DANGER FOR GERMANS SOUTH OF THE MARNE

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, July 17, (Associated Press.) — Forty-eight hours have sufficed for the holding of the German masses launched in the Crown Prince's great offensive on Monday. The enemy units which were turned back from the direction of Paris and are endeavoring to ascend the Marne are being held in check by the French troops.

The position of the German columns which had gained a footing on the south bank of the Marne has become perilous, while to the east of Rheims the German efforts to advance have each time been foiled.

Comparatively slight progress has been made by the enemy on the front west of Rheims, and his hope of effecting a breach in the line has not been realized.

This morning's fighting on the active front of the German drive was marked by purely local attacks, which, however, were very fierce in character.

The Germans sent a heavy column against the Bourbonnerie Farm, in the vicinity of St. Agnan, which had been recaptured by Franco-American forces yesterday, and succeeded in reoccupying it after a furious battle. This is still continuing at this hour.

Further eastward, along the southern bank of the Marne, the Germans attacked and temporarily occupied Montvoisin, until the French came back and ejected them.

While the enemy was attempting a strong push toward Epernay in an effort to cause the evacuation of the Mountain of Rheims, he was also making a number of attacks on each side of that city.

The line on the eastern side of Rheims remains exactly as it was yesterday, and the fluctuations on the western side, according to the military commanders, are absolutely insignificant.

FRENCH SECOND LINE COMING INTO ACTION

But Local Reserves Have Everywhere Been Able to Meet the Shock.

PARIS, July 17.—"On the Marne front our troops of the second line, and perhaps our general reserves already are entering the action," says the Temps today in reviewing the progress of the enemy offensive. "Where our troops have assumed the offensive, to the north of La Chapelle-Monthodon, we have regained ground."

No French troops from other points on the Western front were sent to the present fighting line, says a review issued by the Havas Agency. Only the troops in the line and their reserves bore and countered the shock of the German attack. All circumstances, it is added, point to a favorable outcome of the battle.

GERMAN CASUALTIES ESTIMATED AT 100,000

Those of Allies "Quite Light," According to Paris—French Lost No Guns.

LONDON, July 17.—The casualties sustained by the German troops in the offensive up to the present are estimated at 100,000, according to news received today from the battlefront in France.

The losses of the French in men are stated to have been very small, and they have lost no guns.

A semi-official report from Paris reads:

"While the enemy losses were frightful, ours were quite light, especially east of Rheims. If we were allowed to state the figure it would be most reassuring. Whereas during the previous offensive we had to send for reinforcements from other parts of the front, this time those on the spot sufficed to sustain the shock.

INSISTS OFFENSIVE HAS ALREADY FAILED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—An official French dispatch received here today and dealing with the operations in the Marne-Champagne drive states that "The Germans may continue to follow up their local attacks at various points, but their last great offensive has failed." The dispatch also asserted that never, perhaps, have the enemy's losses been so high and that the disappointment felt in Germany is already having great consequences.

"The correspondent of the Havas Agency at the French front," said the dispatch, "telegraphs that, in view of the insignificant success of the new German offensive, one might ask if the attack of Monday were but a feint, intended to divert our attention from the point on which our enemies meant really to direct their efforts, or if they have in fact thrown the whole of their forces against Château-Thierry and Massiges. There is a certain way of discovering this, to find out the number and importance of the divisions engaged in it.

"According to the first information received, the 2d, 3d, and 5th divisions of the Guard have been identified, also the 200th, 195th, and 190th regiments of sappers; the 1st, 2d and 15th Bavarian divisions; the 10th Silesian division and its reserve division; the 23d Saxon division; the 25th Württemberger division, the 7th Magdeburg division, all divisions of primary importance, representing the élite of the German Army.

"These fine divisions have been put to such a severe test, or are now in such a weakened state, that they will not be able to reappear in the battlefield very soon."

PERSHING REPORTS SUCCESS.

Tells of Our Co-operation with Our French Allies.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—General Pershing's communiqué for Tuesday reaching the War Department today reports the co-operation of American troops with the French east of Rheims in successfully repulsing enemy attacks at all points. The report follows:

Section A—In the course of yesterday's battle American troops east of Rheims co-operated with the French in repulsing the enemy's attack. They maintained their positions at all points and captured a number of prisoners and machine guns.

Yesterday morning in the Vosges the enemy attempted, after artillery preparations, to attack our lines on a front of 1,000 yards. The attack broke down under our artillery fire.

Section B.—The counterattack made by the American troops south of the Marne on July 15 was a complete success. The enemy, who had crossed the river near Fossoy and had forced back a part of our line, was thrown back on the river with severe losses. One battalion was practically annihilated, those who were not killed or wounded being captured by our forces. Officers commanding French troops near this point, as well as others, belonging to the higher command, have expressed great satisfaction concerning the conduct of our forces and the results which they achieved.

On July 15 in the Hilsenfirst region of the Vosges the enemy attempted to attack our line on a front of one thousand yards. After artillery preparations, whcih included the use of trench mortars, they left their lines at 7 o'clock in the morning and commenced to advance through their own wire. A barrage put down properly by our artillery soon drove them back.

In his communiqué for Monday, General Pershing reported that 500 prisoners were taken by the Americans in their counterattack which drove the Germans back to the Marne east of Château-Thierry. The dispatch follows:

Section A.—East of Château-Thierry, where the enemy succeeded this morning in crossing the Marne on our front and gaining some ground, our troops counterattacked and drove the enemy back to the Marne, taking 500 prisoners. In the Vosges five trench raids attempted by the enemy broke down under our fire.

PRAISES AMERICANS' FEAT.

London Press Calls Counterattack the Feature of Battle.

LONDON, July 17.—Prominence is again given to the fighting of the Americans at Fossoy and Jaulgonne on Monday by the newspapers of London. Pointing to detailed reports and commenting editorially, The Telegraph says:

"The feature of the battle upon which the eyes of all the world are fixed, and those of the enemy with particular intentness, is the conduct of the American troops. The magnificent counterattack in which the American Army corps flung back the Germans upon the Marne after they had crossed was much more than the outstanding event of the first day's fighting. It was one of the historical incidents of the whole war in its moral significance."

"Our French comrades should admit the chief honors in the initial days to the resistance of the American troops," says The Graphic. "The Americans showed the enemy the stern stuff of which they are made, and also proved by their tactics that they have taken the measure of Ludendorff's favorite method. They demonstrated the wisdom of the policy of hitting at an offensive as soon as it shows itself."

"By far the most interesting and gratifying event of the battle," says The Daily News, "was the achievement of the Americans. They held, perhaps, the most critical position and kept their front intact. Their success has a significance which the enemy will best appreciate. The Germans have been buoyed up with a belief that the war would be over before the American factor in the struggle became a reality. That belief is now shattered. It never can be restored. That is the momentous fact that emerges from the battle of Fossoy."

PARIS PRESS CONFIDENT.

PARIS, July 17.—All the Paris military critics are in agreement today in the view that yesterday still further accentuated the failure of the German offensive.

The newspapers generally ask the public to have the fullest confidence. They remark upon the fact that the Germans have already thrown support divisions into the fray, whereas up to last evening the French had not yet employed their reserves. When the time comes, they said, the allied counterattack may be expected to drive the Germans rapidly back to the north of the Marne. Le Petit Journal, for instance, says:

"The enemy penetration south of the Marne is bound to come to an end very soon."

"It is perhaps too early to speak of victory," says L'Echo de Paris, "but we may say that the enemy has suffered a gigantic failure, which will cause a sensation throughout Germany."

In the Journal des Débats, Henry Bidou notes that the initial impetus, in which the offensive developed its full strength, has been checked, and that consequently the battle has degenerated into partial, or local, actions.

"It may be asserted," he says, "that the fifth German offensive is a very severe defeat for the enemy."

The converging attack of the Germans was smashed by the brilliant leadership of General H. J. E. Gouraud,, who, according to M. Bidou, leaving his first lines lightly held and putting the line of resistance well to the rear, allowed the German blow to expend itself on empty space. After this false stroke, the enemy was obliged to cross a deadly zone, where he was shot to pieces before reaching the real French line. The French losses were quite insignificant.

The situation in general is regarded by the military critic of the Temps as "relatively satisfactory, since the enemy has not been able to attain any of his presumptuous aims.

"It is true," he continues, "that at the most sensitive point of the front the Germans have been able to cross the Marne along a stretch of fifteen miles, from Fossoy to the other side of Reuil. But the enemy's progress south from the river has been in no way lightning-like, as he expected, and we have regained ground at certain points. We have recoiled at certain places, it is true, and to be regretted, but we are not beaten—far from it. The enemy is held everywhere.

"On the first day the battle went much as usual in every defensive operation. We recoiled on the Marne and between Rheims and Suippes. On the second day the enemy limited his effort to the region extending on both sides of the Marne, realizing fresh progress. Everywhere else the enemy has been checked."

"The German inoffensive offensive" is the expression used by Gustave Théry to describe the latest effort of General Ludendorff, and the advices from the front seem to justify this paradox. If the fighting has not resulted in a French victory, it is held here, it has at least been a serious failure for the Germans.

PERSHING AND BLISS ARE MADE KNIGHTS

LONDON, July 17.—To General John J. Pershing has been awarded the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath and to General Tasker H. Bliss, American representative at the Supreme War Council, has been given the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. This was officially announced today.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Under a provision incorporated in the Army Appropriation bill and approved by the President, officers and enlisted men of the American Army are authorized to accept and wear decorations conferred by allied Governments. This provision was designed particularly to permit the many officers and men receiving crosses of war or other honors for gallantry at the front to wear their decorations.

The elevation of Generals Pershing and Bliss to the Knighthood of England is concrete evidence of the recognition given their services in the great war by the British Government.

The Most Honorable Order of the Bath is one of the oldest of the knightly organizations in Great Britain. It was established in 1399, fell into decay in the reign of Charles II., and was revived by George I. It consists of fifty-five military and twenty-seven civil members, exclusive of the Sovereign, Princes of the blood royal, and distinguished foreigners who may be nominated to the honorary distinction.

The Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George is conferred, exclusive of honorary members, on natural-born subjects of Great Britain who may hold, or have held, high and confidential office within the British territorial possessions, and is the reward for services in relation to the foreign affairs of the empire. The Knights Grand Cross are limited to 100, exclusive of honorary members. The order was instituted in 1818.

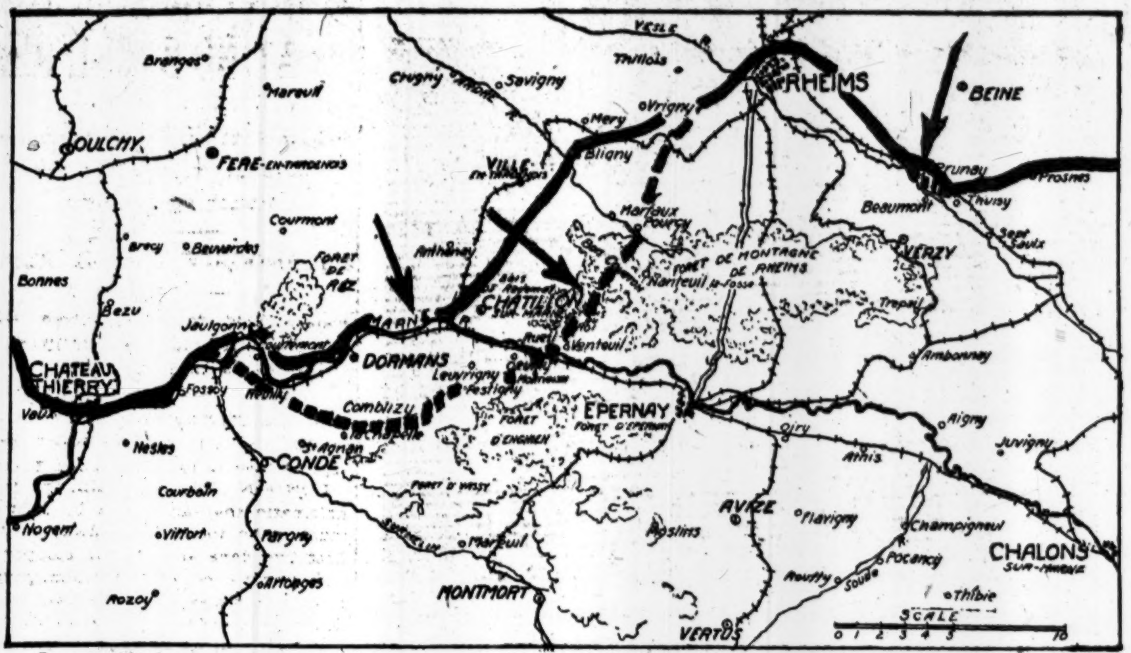
CONGRESSMEN IN FRANCE.

Twelve Crossed with "Blue Devils" to Visit the Fighting Front.

PARIS, July 17.—Twelve Representatives of the United States Congress who purpose visiting the fighting front arrived today at a French port from the United States.

Among other passengers on the steamer was Justin Godart, member of the French Chamber of Deputies; a detachment of Alpine Chasseurs which has been visiting the United States, and a number of Polish volunteers.

Map Record of Third Day of German Drive



In an evident attempt to carry out their plan of enveloping Rheims, the Germans yesterday attacked the allied lines to the east and west of the city, their principal efforts being made in the neighborhood of Beaumont, where they suffered a repulse, and (to the west) on the wooded region forming the fringe of the Mountain of Rheims, where they made a gain, at some points, of a mile and a half.

The third region of most serious German pressure (each being indicated by an arrow) was that to the south of the Marne, against the hills to the north of St. Agnan and La Chapelle-Monthodon, on which the attack seems to have been brought to a standstill.

OUR LINES DOMINATE RIVER

edly lower than during the Aisne offensive. I believe the majority of the prisoners I saw coming from the Kaiser's best and supposedly most experienced divisions, were lads of 19 and 20 years old. They seemed obsessed with the idea that the war would end in September, just as those captured in the Aisne attack said it would end in August. But a significant difference was that the prisoners with whom I talked today said it would not end with a complete German victory but by negotiation. Hitherto the Germans always have held that the war would end in a complete victory for the Kaiser's armies. An increasingly large number say they are tired of the war.

All in all, the impression after the first two days of the new drive is good. The Germans have made some progress, but not a great deal, and it has been bought at a heavy price. As for the sector where the Americans are fighting, the situation certainly is good. We are in an excellent position to drive the Germans in front of us back across the Marne, and if it is done the south side of the river will be cleared of the enemy.

Reports that have just come in show that the Americans fighting east of Rheims held their own yesterday. They retired about two kilometers against the first shock of the drive, but since then they have stood firm. Just after starting the drive the Allied artillery raked the German lines and back areas with sweeping barrages. The effect may be calculated by the fact that with the exception of small rushes the Germans have been unable to renew their drive for Châlons from the north. The country there is flat and sandy, almost entirely lacking of woods and valleys to shelter the German concentrations for attack. Prisoners say the allied artillery played havoc with their lines. Our artillery activity there evidently was more than the Germans expected and messed up their plans.

German Regiments Wiped Out.

One of the prisoners captured today—he used to live in Philadelphia—said the barrage had caught his regiment when it was about to attack and made chop suey of it. Another youthful prisoner said that the division to which he belonged had been so chewed up by artillery fire that its remnants had been sent back to be used as replacements in other divisions. This was a crack guard division.

At one spot east of Rheims a German detachment with a machine gun had been pestering our men, and a young Lieutenant with forty men was sent out to stop it. There was nothing to do but rush the position. Half an hour later a runner brought back this note: "Attack a success. We killed them all."

Early yesterday the Germans launched a small attack against our troops holding Vaux. The Americans put down a barrage behind the attacking party and allowed them to come close enough to use machine guns on them, whereupon the attackers retired with considerable losses. A platoon of our men pursuing brought back thirty prisoners.

Six Germans Downed.

American airmen, both in chase and observation machines, have played a very important rôle in the fighting of the last two days. Our chase machines have brought down six German airmen in the last twenty-four hours and one balloon. In addition, they have strafed the German lines and rear with machine-gun bullets. Observation and photographic machines kept our artillery well informed of conditions back of the enemy lines. Credits for the six German machines go two to Lieutenant Francis Simmonds of New York and one each to Lieutenant Charles Porter of New Rochelle, Lieutenant Arthur Jones of Alabama, Lieutenant George Robertson, and Lieutenant Arthur Abernathy of New Hampshire. The balloon was brought down by Lieutenant Miller.

When Lieutenant Robertson returned to the field after a fight over the American lines he had seventeen bullet holes in his airplane. Lieutenant Abernathy downed his German twenty kilometers back of the lines, and returning was attacked by six Germans. One of fifty bullets which hit his plane went into the engine cylinder, forcing a landing in No Man's Land. Our artillery saw him falling and put down a barrage behind him, protecting him from the Germans until he reached our lines.

A large number of our chase machines, which mount two machine guns, flew all yesterday back of the German lines, sending streams of lead into the columns of Germans on the roads and into their artillery trains. Two daring lads flew down to an altitude of 200 meters and sent bullets into a company of artillery. When the horses were hit they stampeded, throwing the guns into a ditch, where they still are.

Another aviator flew low over a German pontoon bridge over the Marne and, sending bullets from both of his guns into the Germans on the bridge, cleared it of the enemy.

BATTLE IN FURIOUS TEMPEST

Hidden Machine Guns Delayed Germans.

The chief weight of the German cannonade was delivered upon the advance positions occupied by observers, machine gunners and the small groups of daring men whose duty it was to direct a heavy fire upon the enemy as he approached and after this provisional defense to make their escape. Heroically did they acquit themselves of a mission that in many cases called for the final sacrifice.

In safer days I examined their lines on the crest of the Moronvilliers hills and the skillfully hidden machine gun posts in the plain below, designed to meet this very emergency. Imagine a dugout thirty feet deep, large enough to accommodate half a dozen men with their provisions and ammunition for a week, approached by a staircase at the rear and abutting upon a well up which a machine gun can be raised, and down which it can be withdrawn by means of a simple lever. When it is withdrawn there is at a short distance no sign of a pit, and before an assailant can get near it he has to cut his way through successive lines of barbed wire. The gunner, sitting upon a platform at the top of the well, shows only his head and the barrel of his gun above the level of the ground. He would be invisible within the shadow of a clump of dwarf pine trees but for the stream of fire he pours out along scientifically aligned ranges of barbed wire. Hundreds of lives may be lost before a single obstacle of this kind can be reduced.

On Mont Cornillet and other Moronvilliers crests there were several concrete blockhouses, each held by two or three machine gunners, and by this handful of men the successive waves of assault on a broad front were stopped for more than two hours. The fate of these outposts and of the small groups of resistance, which were inevitably surrounded on Monday morning, is known only in a few cases.

One such group reported as late as 5 o'clock Monday evening that it was still holding out, and hoped to survive till rescued by a counterattack. Several groups had made prisoners, and were keeping them jealously. Another handful of heroes, caught between the French and German barrage fire and knowing that its task had been accomplished, destroyed the tunnel it had been holding and cut its way back at the point of the bayonet. Its chief, Lieutenant Transchant, was at once decorated with the Legion of Honor. No less admirable was the devotion of the signalers, who from their outposts sent constant reports of the positions of the enemy.

Effort to Pinch Rheims Salient.

Documents taken on the battlefield and statements made by prisoners throw important light on the aim of this offensive. Briefly, it appears to be to seize Châlons, the great wooded plateau called the Mountain of Rheims, Epernay, and probably Montmirail. This vast stretch of the French centre, when occupied, would be a base for a further and final operation at the nature of which we can only guess. Rheims is to be obtained by envelopment. Although it is at the head of a narrow peninsula protruding into the enemy's lines, the ruined city would be a formidable position to attack frontally. If the French lines on either side should be broken, however, it must fall of itself.

Side thrusts which were to produce this happy result were directed toward Châlons on the east and Epernay on the southwest, and each was to be broadened, the first toward Revigny, thirty miles southeast of Châlons, and the second toward Montmirail, to give room for the deployment of available forces and for subsequent development.

So, while the whole Champagne front has been attacked with special force about Prunay and Prosnes on the west and about Perthes and Souain at the center, (that is to say, toward the two high roads from the north into Châlons,) the German forces on both sides of the Marne have turned, not westward toward Paris, but upstream toward Epernay and the Mountain of Rheims.

Apparent Lapse in German Strategy.

Such, at least, is the first design for the accomplishment of which the German Grand Staff has intrusted to the Crown Prince the largest mass of manoeuvre it could now hope to assemble, and, though the opinion of a layman, even when he has closely watched the war for four years, cannot have much value on such a subject, I will venture to foretell that this strategy will be shown by the event and judged by competent soldiers to be an extraordinary lapse from the high level Ludendorff and his colleagues have often reached.

In the earlier phases of the offensives on the Somme, in Flanders, on the Aisne, and on the Oise they were visibly pursuing a rapid decision by thrusts toward vital objectives before the increase of the American forces should rob them of the initiative. In the present effort it is not too soon to say that they have attempted a great deal more than their strength permitted, and yet if they obtained it all they would not be near any vital objective.

There is no prospect of their reaching Châlons and Ste. Menehould, Epernay, and Montmirail; but if they were, at the cost of a large part of their fifty divisions, to capture these towns with their local grape harvest and stores of champagne, though they would have inconvenienced French communications and ravaged the countryside, they would be no nearer to victory.

The offensive being already a failure, it would be idle to speculate what exterior purposes its success might be supposed to serve in a final attack westward against Paris or eastward against Verdun, Toul, and Nancy. Does the old fox, Ludendorff, imagine that he and his superiority of numbers and his initiative are everlasting? The plan savors of infatuation and will, I imagine, be regarded by the chiefs of the allied armies with something like contempt. As a last stake it is already doomed.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The story from the French battlefields is still one of unceasing German attacks. There can be no doubt that the present drive is a most serious operation, a major operation, with nothing to indicate that it is meant to be anything else. For some reason this attack has been regarded in some quarters as a diversion, an action begun merely for the purpose of concealing the real point of attack and possibly forcing the Allies to withdraw troops from some other vital sector in order to reinforce the Champagne front. A mere consideration of numbers should upset this theory. In the great attack of March 21 the Germans, attacking on a fifty-mile front, used in the opening attack about a half million men, this number rapidly growing as the fighting developed until before the close about a million and a quarter were engaged. The Germans have at least as many men available for this attack. While they have lost heavily in several of their fights, there is still a certain increment to be obtained from the normal source of recruitment, as well as from the returned sick and wounded. There is also Russia, which contains still, or did contain a short time ago, thirty-eight German divisions. It is an error on the side of safety to consider, then, that if Germany so desires she can put into the present fight about the same strength she displayed in her first great offensive. Having already put a half million men into the present fight and still adding to this number as the divisions are bested and have to retire, she still has for the gamble at least as many more. But she has not enough either of men or of material to begin another such colossal move in another sector while the present one is in progress.

There is another thing to remember also with respect to this question of the Germans still available for this fighting. As long as Germany has this force to throw in the Allies are in danger, and, optimistic reports to the contrary, the battle is far from being ended. It has opened most auspiciously for the Allies. The attempt to advance during two days of the hardest fighting has been beaten except over the small but most important front where the Marne has been crossed and the unimportant front between the Marne and Rheims. But the fighting all along the line is bitter and incessant; fresh troops are being thrown in rapidly, and there are plenty of them to throw in. The results of the battle are therefore still in doubt.

We may, however, with reason look back to previous efforts of this kind and draw certain conclusions therefrom. In every offensive which can be termed successful—and this refers to the attack on March 21, to the attack against the line at Armentières somewhat later, and the attack against the French in the valley of the Allette River—the success came quickly, owing to the overwhelming of the allied lines in the first rush. Wherever this has not been accomplished the attack has ultimately failed, and has failed with disastrous losses. The present effort appears to come under the latter class. There has been no surprise, no indication of confusion or panic in the defense. On the contrary, every preparation had been made to receive the Germans, and to meet them at least half way. Such gains as the Germans are making—and they are by no means to be ignored—are being made as a result of the heaviest fighting, fighting for every foot of ground. It is expensive, grueling. Germany must either soon break this resistance or do as she did in the Matz Valley, acknowledge herself defeated.

As the German attack is shaping up now, it is entirely a battle against the Champagne line. The first objective now appears to be Rheims. In an attack some time ago it was found that the defenses of Rheims on the north were too strong to be forced by a frontal attack. It is an operation for envelopment which is now under way. The Germans are driving eastward still, along the southern bank of the Marne, and as they advance are uncovering the French line on the other bank, forcing that to give way also. At the same time they are trying, but with much less success, to break down the French resistance at Prunay, southeast of Rheims, on the Marne-Aisne Canal. These two operations, moving toward each other where they move at all, will, if successful, draw a loop around Rheims with grave results. Even, however, if the movement from Prunay continues to be a failure, that along the Marne will, if it continues, accomplish the desired purpose and will force a retirement of the entire Champagne line. Thus all of the country south of Rheims will have to be abandoned, including the forest of Rheims, about ten miles south of the city.

This movement is, of course, not imminent. But this is the German plan as it reveals itself up to the present time and this appears to be the real danger. As an offset to this we have the great natural strength of the French positions south of the Marne and east of their present line, positions marked by the forests of Enghuin and of Epernay and the many lakes which dot this region. This will prove a stumbling block of the first order.

GERMANS LESSEN SCOPE OF DRIVE

jective of his division, which started from Nauroy, was the Marne at Ruizy. The indicated line of march curved westward, showing that the German intention was to swing in that direction and join hands at Epernay with the force advancing eastward along the Marne. Further on the right the objective was certainly Châlons, which the Germans expected to reach before noon today. It was a fine strategic conception, as it would have given them the whole line of the Marne as a base. Subsequent operations failed dismally.

DROVE BACK 50 GERMANS.

Seven Americans Cut Their Way Through Superior Enemy Force.

Friends of Private William Ranzweller of 365 Dill Place, Ridgewood, have received word from him of a fight in which he and six other American soldiers engaged a party of fifty Germans, and came out of the encounter successfully. Ranzweller is 22 years of age, and a son of Mrs. Anna Ranzweller, a widow. He has three younger brothers and a sister. He went to Camp Upton in December, and left for France about three months ago.

It appears that Ranzweller and his comrades became separated from their company, and were without an officer when they encountered the enemy's barrage fire, and they ran into the party of Germans. The Germans attacked with rifles, grenades, and trench mortars.

The seven Americans dropped back into a small cave, but were soon surrounded. They rushed out, firing their rifles, and four of them, including Ranzweller, got back to their company and helped drive the Germans back.

CRISIS IN DRIVE PAST, WASHINGTON THINKS

Officials Believe It Has Degenerated Into Local Actions on 20-Mile Front.

GERMANS' FLANKS EXPOSED

Communication Lines of Those Who Have Crossed the Marne Are Seriously Menaced.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—While official reports from Generals Pershing and Bliss were too belated to permit formal conclusions to be drawn today by military authorities here as to the situation along the front where the German offensive was still beating against American, French, and Italian defenders, it was clear that they read press advices as indicating that the crisis was past and the enemy's plans frustrated.

Secretary Baker would not express an opinion today as to what was to be expected in France. General March, chief of staff, was equally reticent and deferred a midweek conference with newspaper correspondents on the ground that his official advices would not permit him to go very far toward making clear to his hearers just what is occurring at the front.

Apparently, both Generals Pershing and Bliss are observing great caution in formulating their reports. They have studiously avoided overoptimistic statements from the first, and it is understood that their reports, which have not been made public, have been confined strictly to the facts of the great action that have been established beyond question in every case. War Department officials follow the same practice. Among officials generally, however, it was obvious that the battle was regarded as more than half won.

As press accounts and the brief official communiqués from Paris and Berlin have so far disclosed the situation, the great thrust, starting over a sweep of more than sixty miles, has been narrowed down in three days of fighting to only one active sector, where the enemy still was moving sluggishly at last reports. Sharp counterassaults by Franco-American forces in this sector indicated, it was thought, that still further restriction of the active line was to be expected.

Purely Local Action.

In effect, officers said, agreeing with the views expressed both in France and London today, the great offensive already has degenerated into a purely local action on a front of less than twenty miles. This sector lies between the point just east of the original American positions on the Marne in the Jaulgonne sector to the wooded region west of Rheims. It is possible that the activity on the German left, in these woods, will result in a flanking operation at Rheims itself, but officers here were not inclined to think so. To most observers the centre of interest was the twelve-mile stretch on the south bank of the Marne which the enemy holds, and his thrust down the river valley toward Zigreny.

Even here, however, the Germans have been able to force their way only some four miles beyond the river line at the point of deepest penetration and their crossings, upon which the maintenance of the forward lines and the continuance of the push down the valley depends, were reported to be under direct artillery fire. At best their progress was painfully slow, it was pointed out, in an action where some twenty picked divisions of storm troops fresh from a month of rest and special training were known definitely to have been engaged and many of them badly shattered.

Aside from the possibility that later advices would show that the German war machine had been got into motion after having been bogged down by the fierce resistance of the French and allied troops, officers looked with particular attention at the very hopeful prospect of a counterstroke which they believed might have important results.

Enemy's Hazardous Position.

It was still indicated by today's reports that the Germans who have crossed the river stand with both flanks exposed and with their communication lines seriously menaced. The twelve-mile stretch of the south bank of the river the enemy holds was not regarded as wide enough to protect the flow of supply and ammunition trains and of replacement divisions to the front. Modern gun ranges and the increasing effectiveness of aircraft, it was said, made any salient depending upon so narrow a base a dangerous one. It was believed that unless the Germans could widen their positions they will be compelled to fall back to the river or face the possibility of being trapped as the Austrians were on the Piave.

The extent of any countermovement that might be launched would depend wholly upon General Foch's available reserves and upon his own campaign plans It is regarded as certain, however, that he would not overlook an opportunity to annihilate an enemy division or two, possibly the bulk of General von Boehm's army, even if the time for more extended counterstrokes has not come.

Accounts of the activities of French airmen during the first day of the battle are reaching Washington, giving a vivid picture of the constantly growing part the air forces are playing in modern war. Tons of bombs were dropped on the Germans as they surged forward to cross the Marne. Concentration points far to the rear, where troops and supply trains waited orders, were hunted out and deluged with bombs, while moving columns were harrassed with machine-gun fire from above. These operations increased the enemy's difficulties, and are still adding to them.

Information has reached allied circles here which creates an impression that the present German stroke was prompted more by internal economic considerations and by the state of political unrest in Austria and to a lesser extent in Germany than by purely military reasons.

Sees New Phase of War.

The initial failure of the new German offensive was characteristic of a new phase of the war, said M. Edouard de Billy, Deputy French High Commissioner to the United States, today.

"The result of the first two days' fighting is, on half of the front, decidedly in our favor," said M. de Billy. "Over the rest of the front the enemy succeeded in gaining at most four miles at the price of heavy losses.

"Everybody feels that the first phase of the German offensive is a failure, and this may mean within a few days the failure of the whole offensive.

"For two months Germany has used all possible means in her power to replace her losses in men and to raise the offensive power of her army. Reinforcements taken from the German troops of occupation in Russia; use of Russians to replace German workers; use of Austrian troops for secondary tasks at the rear, or on Belgian territory; suppression of all the delays granted to drafted men; drafting of part of the class of 1920.

"By these efforts we can appraise the results that Germany is seeking and the importance of an offensive that cannot be indefinitely repeated. Germany's human supply is not inexhaustible.

"With an adversary whose strength seems to have reached its utter limit, the French Army of 1918, in spite of the strain of former battles, in spite of an extension of the French front of nearly 100 kilometers, has never been materially and morally stronger.

"American assistance, growing every day, has given us, if possible, still greater confidence in the final victory. On the 14th of July the American people expressed their brotherly love for France. On the 15th the soldiers of the United States, fighting with the French, have sealed this pact with their blood.

"With such troops, inspired by such a spirit of comradeship and sacrifice, we can wait for the future with the confidence shown under the bombardment by the population of Paris."

meant that something had happened to either Major Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., or Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, probably the latter.

The message seemed most probably to refer to either of these two, because they were the only sons of the ex-President engaged in the fighting at present. Captain Archie Roosevelt is recovering from a shattered knee cap and other injuries. Captain Kermit, who has been serving in Mesopotamia with the British and is now on his way to France. Major Theodore Roosevelt, recently cited for heroism in sticking to his post through a gas attack, may not yet have returned to his battalion.

Aside from the hint in the dispatch, both Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt were prepared for tragic news and steeled to bear it. With four of their sons in the battle and two wounded, they realized fully that the chances were very strongly against all four surviving. They felt that any day might bring them such news.

Colonel Roosevelt learned of his son's death yesterday morning at 11 o'clock when a correspondent called at his home at Oyster Bay with dispatches. He was outwardly calm when he heard the news, and he read the dispatches carefully. Then he left the room to break the news to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Many Messages of Condolence.

Later dispatches were communicated to Colonel Roosevelt. He received no official word on the subject, but he was inclined to believe that the newspaper dispatches were correct, and that it was futile to hope for better news. He had hardly received the news himself, when telegrams began to pour in at Oyster Bay. Before night more than 500 telegrams and cablegrams of condolence had been received. One of these was a cablegram from Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., in Paris, which read: "Report here absolutely unconfirmed."

Colonel Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt motored to New York in the afternoon and went to the Hotel Langdon, where friends called on them. Representatives of the family let it be known that the Colonel would have nothing to say in addition to his brief statement, and that the Roosevelts desired privacy during their stay in this city.

In messages of sympathy to the parents of men who have been killed in battle, Colonel Roosevelt has expressed the same spirit which appears in his statement yesterday, that pride in their sacrifice should be their dominating thought. While he allowed no expression of grief to escape him on receiving the news yesterday, his affection for his sons has been one of chief interest in his life, and he forcibly expressed himself on the subject last November at a meeting at Madison Square Garden, where he was campaigning for Mayor Mitchel. A man in the audience shouted at the Colonel to ask him why he was not in France. Colonel Roosevelt replied:

"I asked not only to go over there, but I came with 100,000 more men in my hands to help. But I will tell you, you man over there, that I have sent my four sons. I have sent over my four boys, for each of whose lives I care a thousand times more than I care for my own, if you can understand that, you creature over there."

Colonel Roosevelt let it be known that despite the sad news he would not change his plans and would speak at Saratoga Springs today. This, however, was not a surprise to those familiar with his views on the manner in which parents should regard the loss of the lives of their children in war. It will be remembered also that the Colonel himself, when shot in the chest and badly wounded in 1912, insisted on making his speech just the same.

Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt began active service as an American aviator in France this Spring. Only July 3 he took part in an aerial battle between American and German machines in the Marne region. On July 10 he brought down his first German airplane in a fight north of Château-Thierry. The story of this fight was told as follows in a dispatch at the time:

"Lieutenant Roosevelt with three other pilots was flying at a height of 5,000 yards, eight miles inside the German lines, when the machines became separated. Soon after, Roosevelt saw three planes which he thought were his companions and started to join them. He was close by, approaching the machines from the rear, when he saw his mistake, for the planes were German.

"Roosevelt immediately opened fire, and after fifty shots tracers penetrated the fuselage of the nearest German machine and it went into a spinning nose dive, falling through the clouds 2,000 yards below.

"The Lieutenant is certain it must have crashed, for no pilot voluntarily goes into a 2,000-yard spinning nose dive. The two remaining German airplanes attacked Roosevelt, but he managed to make good his escape and returned to the field, himself and his machine unscratched."

Quentin Roosevelt, who was 21 years old, was in his sophomore year at Harvard when this country declared war. When it was still in debate whether this country would send expeditionary forces to Europe he went to Canada and enlisted in the Canadian Aviation Corps for instruction. When it was decided to send troops to Europe he was transferred to the United States Signal Corps as a private. Lawrence F. Abbott, a biographer of Colonel Roosevelt and a close friend of the family, gave this account of the attitude of Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt toward the enlistment of their youngest son, in Munsey's Magazine:

"During a recent visit at Sagamore Hill I asked Quentin's father and mother if they did not feel it to be a special hardship in his case that at so early an age he should have to give up his education and many of his associations at Harvard, which he could never renew, even if the war leaves him unscathed. They both replied that they were particularly glad that on his own initiative he had taken exactly the course which has put him in one of the most exacting and dangerous branches of the service."

Sorrow In Oyster Bay.

The news of the death of young Roosevelt was a heavy blow to the town of Oyster Bay, where he was a great favorite. He had lived a large part of the last nine years at Oyster Bay, had been a companion of most of the boys his age in the village, and was a friend of every man, woman, and child there.

The townspeople refused at first to believe the news, but when they found that Colonel Roosevelt thought there was little ground for hope, they ran up flags at half mast and added to the Oyster Bay service flag in Townsend Park its first gold star.

Quentin Roosevelt was a graduate of the Groton School, standing second in the class, and entered Harvard in 1916, where he was known as a lively and highly popular student.

His death is the third casualty in the Roosevelt family. Captain Archibald Roosevelt was wounded on March 11, his left arm being broken in two places and his right leg and knee-cap penetrated by shrapnel. The French War Cross was presented to him and Colonel Roosevelt sent a telegram in which he said:

"Your cross is the greatest possession the family has."

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., the eldest son, was the next to be hurt. He had attended the first Plattsburg Camp and went to France in June, 1917, as a member of the staff of General Pershing. He was gassed about three weeks ago and cited for bravery in remaining with his battalion all through its advance in spite of his condition.

Kermit Roosevelt was attending the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg in July, 1917, when he accepted a commission as Captain in the British Army and went to Mesopotamia. Last month he was decorated with the British Military Cross for gallantry in two engagements, in which he was a Captain of sappers. Several weeks ago he left the British Army to take his place with the Americans in France.

WHITMAN SENDS SYMPATHY.

Governor Expresses Condolences to Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 17.—On learning of the death of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, Governor Whitman today sent the following telegram of sympathy to Colonel Roosevelt at Oyster Bay:

"I have learned that your son has given his life for his country in France. All of the people of New York sympathize with his father and mother in their grief."

Jonas Lippmann, chief editor of the monthly magazine The Voice of Alsace-Lorraine, has sent this telegram to Colonel Roosevelt:

"We people of Alsace-Lorraine residing in the United States find no adequate words to express to you and to Mrs. Roosevelt our sympathy in this hour of sadness. Our hearts go out with deep gratitude to all of you brave Americans who are giving your lives and your all for the liberation of oppressed peoples. God bless America."

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 17.—The Republican State Committee at Saratoga tonight adopted the following resolution by a unanimous rising vote:

Whereas, We have just learned of the death in action of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt of the United States Expeditionary Forces; therefore, it is

Resolved, That we hereby express to his father, Theodore Roosevelt; his mother, and all the other members of his family our deep sympathy in their bereavement.

HIS BOYHOOD IN WASHINGTON.

Nature Study and Pranks Marked Young Roosevelt's Days There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—When Quentin Roosevelt left for service as an aviator with the American overseas forces his friends in Washington and those who had known him at Oyster Bay said "Good bye" with the conviction that he would never return.

It was not that they thought the youngest son of the ex-President would be foolhardy; it was their conviction that he would get to the forefront of the fighting just as quickly as his father had tried to go there and that he would give everything that there was in him to accomplish something that would be worth while in defeating the Kaiser.

When word was received here a few days ago that young Roosevelt had downed his first German plane and was already in the thick of the fight, every one who has known him said, "I told you so. He couldn't do otherwise."

Quentin's life while in Washington—he was running around here in kilts and afterward in short trousers when his father was President—was just the adventurous childhood of the boy who later slammed his motor cycle into a tree at Oyster Bay when he was trying to establish a new speed record and smiled when a home-assembled automobile took a corner under his guidance on one wheel. He was not afraid for himself and worried only about the expense of rebuilding the motor cycle.

During his father's last term as President, Quentin Roosevelt was a pupil at the Peter Force Public School, in Massachusetts Avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, next door to the house built by Clarence Moore, the noted horseman, who lost his life on the Titanic.

Colonel Roosevelt wanted him to go there because he believed in that kind of democracy. The other pupils looked upon him as "the President's son," but the youngster never thought of that himself. He was just a pupil, out to have the best time that his presence in the world permitted.

Ben W Murch, Supervising Principal of the first school division, who was Principal of the Force School when young Roosevelt entered upon his studies at the age of 6, paid him this tribute:

"Quentin's leading characteristic was determination to succeed in anything. Always at the forefront in every movement in the school, he was the liveliest kind of boy, showing even in those early years the qualities which made his father what he is. He was uncommonly bright intellectually and was always at the head of any athletic movement in the school. We did not have the elaborate athletic system then that we now have, but Quentin always had something new to try out in the way of sport."

Quentin Roosevelt was born here at the family home in November, 1897, when his father was Assistant Secretary of the Navy under President McKinley. He showed a great love for animal life, and there were many stories told about him.

A pony had been given by Cornelius N. Bliss, then Secretary of the Interior, to Quentin's older brother, Archibald B. Roosevelt, now a Captain in the American overseas forces. At one time, when Archie was ill with diphtheria, Quentin became obsessed by the belief that his brother's recovery depended upon his seeing the pony. He managed to get the animal into the private elevator of the White House and took him in the elevator to the bedroom on the upper floor. There has always been a suspicion that Colonel Roosevelt was a party to the prank.

That was but one incident. Birds and beasts and even reptiles were included in the small menagerie which he collected, and to which many friends, who learned that Colonel Roosevelt encouraged the boy's study of nature at first hand, contributed.

A story was told today by a friend of the family about an occasion when Quentin was found on his way to the White House on a street car with a hive of bees, an event which caused every one on the car but the boy no end of worry.

On another occasion, dressed in Indian garb, with turkey feathers trailing down his back, Quentin organized a band of Indians among the youngsters of the neighborhood, and directed desperate tribal battles under the ancient elms of the White House grounds.

In connection with his school life another story was recalled here today. The teacher was asking each member of the class to state the occupation of his father. Quentin's reply was: "My father is just it."

Quentin's death was discussed everywhere in Washington today. Cabinet officers and men who have been placed in other positions of the greatest responsibility talked of it. Those were not lacking who expressed the belief that Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt had much of which to be proud, as well as sorrowful, when they heard that the first of their sons had given up his life for his country.

VETERANS PAY TRIBUTE.

The Spanish War Veterans closing their annual encampment in Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon stood at attention for one minute in honor of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt and their dead comrades. Following this tribute, the veterans sent a message of condolence to Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Just before the encampment broke up a contest developed for the post of Department Commander. Thomas F. Gannon was finally elected, receiving 123 votes against 114 for Colonel Ardolph L. Kline, who sought re-election. Other officers elected were: Senior Vice Commander, Major Charles T. Shinn of Brooklyn; Junior Vice Commander, William Lanigan of Troy, and Delegates at Large, P. J. Harney, New York; W. Foster, Utica; Isaac Joel, Mount Vernon, and M. A. Florea of Brooklyn.

UNREDEEMED GREEKS GRATEFUL TO AMERICA

Call on Our Minister in Athens to Extend Independence Day Congratulations.

By Cable to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, July 17.—The Central Committee of Unredeemed Hellenes, on the occasion of the Independence Day of the great American Republic, has officially visited the Minister of the United States at Athens and our President, N. G. Nyriakedes, made the following toast:

"Sir, the Central Committee of Unredeemed Hellenes, interpreting the thoughts and feelings of enslaved Greeks in Thrace and Asia Minor, and of those who took refuge in this corner of Greece independent, on the occasion of the day celebrating your country's independence deems it is its bounden duty to express its congratulations and its deepest gratitude to the great American Republic, which, faithful to its ideals and its traditions, undertook so gallantly to defend the cause of liberty and justice and to become in the whole universe the most eloquent interpreter of outraged laws and menaced civilization.

"Sir, the more we think of the fact that the blood of your illustrious countrymen is so lavishly shed in the battlefields of Europe and that all the unbounded resources of your noble country are dedicated to serve the struggle of the Allies for something higher, for something loftier, for something immortal, for the liberty and national restoration of all underyoke small nationalities, the more our hearts are filled with admiration and profound devotion to your noble country and the more we all are resolutely determined to take an active and most energetic part in this struggle of liberation.

"Honor and glory to the great American Republic and to the American people for their voluntary sacrifices to save the imperiled civilization of Europe. Honor and glory to their allies. We all pray and work for the successful termination of the war, for peace equally just to big and small nations, for an honorable peace without any strains of indignities and humiliations to our allies, and for a lasting peace which will prevent bloodshed and catastrophes in the future. This the great American Republic and her allies will secure to mankind."

The American Minister thanked the committee and promised to support the cause of oppressed Hellenism. He further added that the Greek people love America.

We shall esteem it a great favor to our just cause if you kindly publish the same in your valuable paper.

N. G. KYRIAKIDES,

LUDENDORFF HOLDS REINS

Kaiser Said to Have Given Him Authority to Test Military Force to the Utmost.

LONDON, July 17.—Although it is axiomatic that an attack by rupture must make its chief headway in the first two days and that if stopped it can never recover its momentum, those who are experts in the war game are not content to rest in the idea that the Germans have already suffered a reverse in their fifth offensive. Our leaders have learned much in the last few months, and it is only fair to assume that Ludendorff and the German Staff also have been studying the lessons of the great battle. It is not without some well matured plan, more spacious than fifty miles east and west of Rheims, that they have steamrolled Berlin and seized for themselves full authority, both civilian and military.

I find among intelligence officials an inclination to credit the German Staff with very far-reaching designs in which a temporary check has perhaps been discounted and allowance has been made also for some formidable offensive move by Foch. In the Secret Service there is always a disposition to exaggerate the German foresight and cunning, and while many are celebrating victory, the Intelligence Departments are looking for "niggers in the woodpile."

From the time Kühlmann made his famous Reichstag speech these experts held that it was all prearranged to clear the way for the military authorities to assume control of the civil Government. The world-conquering element has been impatient at the interference from the Reichstag influences. Ludendorff is a true disciple of Frederick the Great, and despises democracy and all its works. He and his clique have been clamoring for "a chance to win the war."

As is well known, the Kaiser's power, instead of being autocratic these days, is confined largely to arbitrating between two factions—militarist and civilian. These influences are pretty evenly balanced, and the side prevails to which the Kaiser throws his approval. He plays one against the other in order to make his influence potential.

If Kühlmann's speech had evoked a great popular response, the Kaiser might have thrown his weight on that side of the scale. It befell that the Pan Germans made the biggest showing and overwhelmed the peace party, which numbers a majority in the Reichstag and has behind it possibly three-fourths of the German population, including the soldiers in the trenches, who are so ingrained in the habit of obedience and so tame under the iron authority of the ruling class that they dare not make a bold stand.

Those who get information through underground channels say that Ludendorff and von Tirpitz foresaw these results, and, having realized their ambition for unity of control, are prepared to put the uncompromising military policy to the fullest test. This reading of German conditions points to a desperate trying out of comprehensive plans which will stop at no sacrifices and which aim at an early military decision no matter what the cost.

The Kaiser has thrown the reins to Ludendorff, who is virtually military dictator. He is to be allowed to carry out his theories to a conclusion in this battle or series of battles. If he fails, the Reichstag faction will have its inning. It is even possible that the Reichstag will be formally clothed with power and responsibility in sufficient measure to meet the prime condition laid down in President Wilson's Mount Vernon address.

SAW AMERICANS DOWN 13 GERMAN AIRPLANES

Our Men Thought They Had Bagged Only Eight—French Credit Them with Five More.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 17, (Associated Press.) — French observers reported today that thirteen enemy airplanes fell in the region over which an American pursuit squadron was patrolling and fighting on Tuesday.

Within the American lines it had been considered sure that the Americans had downed eight, and possibly nine, enemy planes.

Lieutenant John McArthur of Buffalo, N. Y., this afternoon drove down a two-seater German airplane in a fight which began over the allied line near Dormans, and during which the American pilot flew within 100 feet of the ground at places where German anti-aircraft and machine gunners abounded. There were several bullet holes in McArthur's machine, fired from guns on the ground.

While returning to the American line, McArthur encountered eight enemy machines, but fought all of them off and landed safely. He had fired 500 shots during his travels.

The machine driven down on Wednesday by Lieutenant McArthur is the third to his credit. His first machine was sent down on June 25 between Pont-à-Mousson and Thiaucourt and the second north of Chateau-Thierry July 2.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 17, (Associated Press.)—American negro troops are helping to hold the allied line against the fifth German offensive.

They requested the favor of being permitted to take over a part of the line of attack, though they had been holding a piece of a French sector for the last three months without relief.

PARIS WELL CONTENT WITH THE SITUATION

EXPECTS NEW PEACE MOVE

Prisoners Complain That They Were "Betrayed" by Commanders, Who Promised Easy Victory.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 17.—Paris is well satisfied this morning with the general situation at the beginning of the third day of the German offensive, and is recalling with the utmost appreciation one of the oracular utterances of the great Prussian militarist apostle Bernhardi to the effect that an offensive which is brought to a standstill is a conquered offensive. This exactly reflects the French view of the situation this morning.

At the same time Paris is too levelheaded not to realize that it is too soon to speak of victory. Opinion here, however, insists that it may already be said with assurance that the enemy has received a colossal check which must have a widespread influence on the morale of the people throughout the Central Empires. The high hopes held out by the Military Party to the people at home that the tremendous peace offensive would insure speedy and decisive victory have also proved so utterly unfounded that the eager longings of the hungry people must be crumbling today like a pack of cards.

Prisoners taken at the Marne yesterday in many cases complained bitterly that they had been "betrayed" by the German commanders, who had assured them that the French were a beaten army without morale or material, and that this last great offensive would be nothing more than an easy march forward behind the tremendous power of the German guns. Naturally, the facts of the negative results of the offensive will be disguised as much as possible, but the poverty of the German official communiqués alone speaks eloquently of the enemy's failure.

When Ludendorff is driven on the second day of an offensive along a front of fifty miles to feature the fact that at one point "we succeeded in penetrating a portion of the French front," and is compelled in another instance to satisfy himself by announcing the capture of individual trenches such as Kerberg, Poehlberg, and Fightelburg, it is evident that the German people are being taught to be satisfied with very little. These three trenches, as a matter of fact, are merely advance lines which the French evacuated in advance of the attack in order to meet the enemy in their real fighting positions behind. From these fighting positions they have never budged, despite repeated German onslaughts.

Satisfied that the frightful menace of the offensive has been removed, Paris is wondering what effect the German check will have on the enemy plans as a whole. It is thought that the full check the Germans have received must inevitably stimulate the longing for peace, which, it is believed, both German people and army ardently desire, and opinion here is preparing to hear news that diplomatic overtures for conversations, possibly through the same medium as before, are already under way. Under no circumstances, however, are such efforts likely to meet with a favorable reception here. French opinion today is more firmly convinced than ever that the only possible way to peace lies in victory over the enemy in the field.

PUPIL OF VERNON CASTLE

Lieutenant Abram Robertson Frye of 452 Riverside Drive, reported in yesterday's casualty list as killed in an airplane accident, was a Colgate University athlete. He entered Colgate in 1916, and made the 'Varsity football team in his freshman year, at the same time distinguishing himself on the track team. He enlisted at Allentown, Penn., the following June as a Sergeant in the Ambulance Service, but obtained a transfer to the Aviation Section, Signal Corps.

Frye was commissioned a Second Lieutenant this year, after training at Toronto and at Fort Worth under the supervision of the Royal Flying Corps. One of his instructors at Toronto was the late Captain Vernon Castle. He had been recently recommended for promotion. Two days before the date of his death, July 9, his mother received this cablegram from him: "My love."

Shortly after he received a telegram from the War Department anouncing the death of his son Max, in action in France, Israel Feinsod, a contractor at 402 Hunterdon Street, Newark, received a letter from Mme. Clemenceau-Jacquemaire, daughter of the French Premier, who is a nurse in the hospital where Feinsod died. The letter read:

"I am sorry to have to tell you that your brave little soldier had to be operated upon this morning and passed away in spite of all our efforts to save him. He will be buried in the cemetery of this little city, in the part reserved for Frenchmen and Americans. His coffin will be put in the church and covered with the flags of both nations."

Feinsod was an electrician before he went into the army last October. He went to France in January, and was wounded June 7. His mother is at Sharon Springs, N. Y., and has not been informed of her son's death.

Ninth Infantryman Dies.

Gerald D. Fitzgerald, dead from wounds received July 3, was 25 years old, and enlisted a year ago in Company F, 9th Infantry. His last letter home said he was "continuously in the trenches under a veritable hell of fire, so that it is hard for a man to come out on top." Fitzgerald lived with his parents at 3,141 Kingsbridge Terrace, the Bronx. He was employed as a clerk by the New York Central Railroad. He went to France last September, and in a letter home said that his regiment was one of the first to penetrate the German lines at Château-Thierry. A brother is with a motor repair unit in Italy.

Private John Tesoro was killed in action on June 23, fighting with Company B, Seventh United States Infantry. Tesoro was 24 years old, formerly lived at 738 East Tremont Avenue, the Bronx, and before he was drafted, six months ago, worked in his father's grocery store, He wrote on Mothers' Day praising the thoroughness of the authorities in looking after the welfare of the enlisted men.

Elliott Van Pelt of 430 East 154th Street was notified yesterday that on July 2 the sixty-sixth anniversary of his birth, his son Milton Evans Van Pelt, 20 years old, attached to the Headquarters Company 23d Infantry, Second Division, has been killed in action. Before enlisting he was a clerk in the Superintendent's office on Ward's Island.

The parents of Corporal Morris Schuchman, severely wounded, had left 1,850 Fifth Avenue yesterday morning for a stay in the country. Friends said the Corporal, 19 years old, had enlisted at the outset of war. About two months ago his parents received a letter stating that he had been severely wounded and had already returned to the trenches. He was formerly a clerk.

Sergeant Charles Ernest Montayne, killed in action, was 19 years old and enlisted on June 16, 1917. He was the first member of the Holy Innocents Episcopal Church, Hoboken, N. J., to enlist and the first killed in battle. There are fifty-four other members of the church in service. Sergeant Montayne's father, Charles M. Montayne, is Quartermaster of the Hoboken ferries and lives at 30 Park Terrace, West Orange.

Private Attaviano Pettineo, severely wounded, lived with his sister, Mrs. Antonio Lamonica, at 42 Jefferson Street, Newark, N. J. Pettineo is 20 years old, and enlisted June 3, 1917. He was born in Italy and had been here only three years. His mother lives in Italy and his father is dead.

The Russian Americans.

Private Charles Afrenoff, killed in action, lived with his aunt, Mrs. Aaron Shefter, at 1,778 Park Place, Brooklyn. He was born in Russia 19 years ago, enlisted last March, and sailed for France last month. Abraham Zung, severely wounded, lived with his uncle, Morris Thea, at 503 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, having left his family in Russia when he came here several years ago. He enlisted last November, and after training at Syracuse was assigned to the Supply Company, 23d Infantry, as a wagoner. Mr. Thea said yesterday that Zung's letter showed him to be continually worrying about his folks in Russia, from whom he had heard nothing since 1914.

Private Harry Berry, severely wounded, was drafted from Ogdensburg, N. J., reporting at Camp Dix in November last. He is 28 years old, and was employed in the New Jersey Zinc Company's plant near Ogdensburg.

Francis J. Buckley was drowned and his body was not recovered, according to the notification received by his parents at 207 Ralph Street, Brooklyn, yesterday. Buckley was 19 years old when he joined the 69th Regiment, New York State Guard, last August, after being rejected for the regulars because he was under weight. Training with the State organization built him up, and he got into the Federal service in February, being assigned to Company D, 1st Replacement Engineers. He was a graduate of Boys' High School and the parochial school of Our Lady of Good Counsel, and before his enlistment was studying architecture with the Turner Construction Company of Manhattan. On Decoration Day he wrote from France, telling how his company had placed flowers on the graves of the American dead.

Corporal Luke Napodano of 203 First Street, Brooklyn, was killed in action on June 27, according to a notification received last night by his father. Napodano was 20 years old, enlisted in June, 1917, in Company H, 9th Infantry, going to Syracuse, and thence overseas. He was graduated at Public School No. 4, Seventh Avenue and Second Street, Brooklyn.

Private Morris Krupnick, a Russian, drafted six months ago, was killed in action three weeks after sailing from a Southern port. He was 22 years old, and was trained at Camp Upton and Sevier, the latter in South Carolina. At the address given in the list, 620 Stone Street, Brooklyn, an uncle, Max Rabinowitz, said he had not yet been officially notified of his nephew's death.

James Anthony Esposito, severely wounded, lived with his parents at 68 Wright Street, Jersey City, before enlisting last August. He was an armorer, assigned to Company D, 38th Infantry, a regiment that up to yesterday had not been reported in action. Esposito's family received a letter from him yesterday, saying that he was in the front line trenches and liked the life.

AMERICA'S SAVINGS FEEDING THE ALLIES

ENGLAND'S SITUATION EASED

Despite the submarine menace, nearly 100,000,000 pounds of beef was shipped from the United States to the allied countries in the month of May. According to officials of the Federal Food Board, the release of so much beef was made possible by the conservation program in this country, and has enabled England to lay a foundation for a substantial meat reserve. The report issued by the Federal Food Board on the subject says:

"America, rising splendidly to her obligation to feed our army and the Allies, sent abroad in May a total of 96,982,000 pounds of beef, more than during any previous month in the nation's history. Pork exports were 281,335,000 pounds, only slightly less than in April. These vast quantities crossed the Atlantic in the face of the submarine menace:

"England's effort to build up a reserve is apparent through analysis of the pork figures. Of the total amount sent abroad, a major part of which went to Great Britain, only 3,374,588 pounds went as fresh pork. Bacon totaled 142,000,000 pounds; hams and shoulders, 51,000,000, and lard, 80,000,000. This has put the great bulk of the pork products on the other side without refrigeration and has enabled England not only to increase her bacon ration slightly, but to see a growing surplus of pork on hand. This has had a stimulating effect upon the morale of the British people.

"Of May beef exports 93,000,000 pounds went to the four major European allies. The United Kingdom took almost all the fresh beef and oleo and nearly half the canned beef. France took 83 per cent. of the tallow, while Belgium received 71 per cent. of the pickled beef.

"Practically all the fresh pork, hams and shoulders, as well as more than half the bacon, lard and canned pork, went to the United Kingdom. France received a larger percentage of the canned pork—45 per cent.—than of any other product. To Italy went bacon and lard only. Of the total shipments of pork products to the Allies the United Kingdom received 77.4 per cent., France 11.6 per cent., Italy 7.7 per cent. and Belgium 3.1 per cent."

Calling attention to the importance of using substitutes for sugar while the supply of the latter is restricted, the Federal Food Board yesterday made the following announcement:

"Some confectioners and others who come under Class A in the new sugar regulations have asserted that undue hardship was being imposed upon them by the curtailment of their allotment to 50 per cent. of last year's requirements. In this connection we are advised by the Food Administration that the Bureau of Chemistry and many private institutions are working upon sugar substitutes, and it is believed their experiments will produce formulas which will be satisfactory and help materially to conserve the use of sugar. The use of 40 per cent. sugar, 40 per cent. corn syrup, and 20 per cent. refined grape sugar is suggested for confectioners.

"Bakers and confectioners will also be interested in knowing that many of the larger hotels have absolutely discontinued the use of cane or beat sugar in making pastries and ice cream, using instead, maple syrup, honey, and corn syrup.

"The sugar distribution division of the Food Administration has advised milk chocolate manufacturers who condense their own milk that, except in cases of increased capacity, they are entitled to no more than 75 per cent. of their last year's consumption of sugar for corresponding months, and that those who do not condense their own milk are entitled to no more than 50 per cent. of their last year's consumption of sugar."

SHOTGUN "BARBARISM" SHOCKS GERMAN PRESS

Tomahawks and Scalping Knives Next for Our Troops, Who Are "Not Honorable Warriors."

THE HAGUE, July 17.—German newspapers received here are raising a pother over a story received in Germany from Switzerland to the effect that a large number of American troops have been supplied with sawed-off shotguns for close fighting.

The Cologne Gazette, in commenting on the report, denounces America's barbarism and assumes that tomahawks and scalping knives will soon appear on the American front. The newspaper warns the German troops that the Americans are not "honorable warriors."

The Weser Zeitung says the barbarous shotguns have been served out not because they are likely to be effective, but because the ill-trained Americans cannot use rifles and are badly supplied with machine guns.

REPORTS U-BOATS AIM TO CAPTURE SEAMEN

Will Make Merchant Crews Feel Full Prison Rigor, Amsterdam Hears.

AMSTERDAM, July 17. — The Telegraff publishes a statement, which it attributes to a reliable source, that German submarine commanders have been ordered as far as possible to make prisoners of the crews of enemy merchantmen, particularly subordinate members of these crews.

The German authorities, it says, intend to treat them not as civilian war prisoners, but to subject them to the most severe regimen of ordinary prisons.

SUNK SHIP CARRYING A SPANISH MINISTER

ATHENS, Greece, July 17.—It is announced from a Spanish source that a Spanish steamship on which Minister Lopez de eVga was returning to Spain had been torpedoed by a German submarine. The ship flew the Minister's flag. The diplomat and his family have been rescued.

Dutch Recalled a German Cargo.

THE HAGUE, July 17.—A Dutch White Book, containing correspondence regarding the convoy to the East Indies, reveals that the convoy actually sailed with German dyestuffs, to which Great Britain objected, and it was recalled. Holland saw that if the dyestuffs remained aboard the convoy would be stopped by British warships, with the inevitable result that the commander of the convoy would offer armed resistance.

"BIG BERTHA" SHELLS NOW AMUSE PARIS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 17.—"Big Bertha," as Parisians call the German long-range gun, has resumed her offensive against Paris. On balance, the damage done is extremely small and the victims very few in number. It may be stated that the antics of this latest sample of German kultur are causing a vastly greater amount of amusement to Paris than anxiety.

Occasionally, it is true, the shells do more or less serious damage, involving injury to persons and at rare intervals loss of life. But this is quite the exception. As a rule, the material damage is extremely slight. An instance of this was afforded by a shell which fell in a street. The missile dropped plump amid the wood blocks at the side of the thoroughfare, within a yard of a newspaper kiosk. Perhaps a hundred wood blocks were removed and scattered over the surface of the adjacent roadway, and a few grazes marked on the upper stories of adjoining buildings, but the concrete surface below the blocks was not broken and no single person was injured. More notable still is the fact that only a few of the glass squares forming the sides of the kiosk were broken and the woman was carrying on business there as usual this morning.

The most amazing instance of a narrow escape took place in a little street where a shell entered the window of a small café and plunged through the floor in front of the cash desk into the cellar below, where it exploded. The cellar extended out under the roadway, and the full force of the explosion passed in that direction, finding the line of least resistance at a point where a single paving stone formed both the surface of the sidewalk and the roof of the cellar. A man was standing facing the road, smoking a cigarette, on the edge of the sidewalk when the paving stone "blew up" behind him and carried him, as though on a chair, across the road and left him on the railing of a second floor balcony. The stone dropped back into the road and the man hung suspended for a moment until a tenant pulled him inside. He was unconscious from the shock, but, on being examined at the hospital, was found otherwise uninjured.

BRITISH NIGHT RAIDS NET MORE PRISONERS

LONDON, July 17.—Raids carried out last night by the British in the Amiens area east of Villers-Bretonneux and in the neighborhood of Hulluch, on the front to the north, resulted in the taking of prisoners, the War Office announced today. The text of the statement reads:

> We captured a few prisoners and machine guns during the night in a successful minor enterprise east of Villers-Bretonneux.
> A raid attempted by the enemy in the same sector was repulsed.
>
> A few prisoners were secured also in the course of a successful raid carried out early this morning by English troops in the neighborhood of Hulluch.
>
> Hostile artillery has been active in the Somme and Ancre sectors, north of the Scarpe, northeast of Bethune and north of Bailleul.

The War Office communication issued this evening says:

>

34 KILLED IN GERMANY BY AIR RAIDS IN JUNE

Enemy Admits 33 Attacks Were Made by Allies—British Bomb Offenburg and Thionville.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—Thirty-three air attacks were made during June by the Allies against German towns and cities, according to a statement issued at Berlin. Twelve of these were against industrial districts in Alsace-Lorraine and Luxemburg. Four were against the Dillingen and Saarbruecken regions and one each at various places in the Rhine district.

The report admits that slight damage was done to blast furnaces in the Saarbrucken region and at Ludwigshafen, while the damage to private houses is said not to be inconsiderable. Thirty-four persons have been killed and thirty-seven severely injured. Thirty-five others suffered slight wounds.

LONDON, July 17.—British aviators again have attacked Offenburg, near Karlsruhe, and Thionville, near Metz, says the official statement from the Air Ministry, issued last night. Good bursts were observed at Offenburg and a fire, followed by explosions, was started at Thionville. The statement reads:

"On July 15 the railway sidings and sheds at Offenburg and a hostile airdrome were successfully bombed. Good bursts were observed. On July 16 our machines attacked the railway and sidings at Thionville. Several bursts were observed on the railway, a fire was started, and several heavy explosions ensued. All our machines returned safely."

GERMANS SPENDING THEIR RESERVES

Gen. Maurice Welcomes the Evidence That They Have Had to Throw in New Forces.

DANGER IS WEST OF RHEIMS

Further Advance There Would Give the Enemy Domination Over Approaches to City.

By Major General Sir FREDERICK MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 17.—During the past twenty-four hours the enemy has been making desperate attempts to recover from their first checks and have evidently thrown more troops into the battle, which is all to the good, as the gains they have made with the help of these additional forces have not changed the situation materially and the German reserves are by so much reduced.

The Crown Prince has evidently abandoned for the present any idea of attempting a drive forward on the whole front of attack and is now endeavoring to exploit such successes as he has gained at points where further progress may give him some substantial return for his very heavy losses.

He has been pressing his attacks to the east of Rheims near Prunay, where he got as far as the Vesle River and at the same time he has been trying to drive in the French front between Rheims and the Marne, the object of these converging attacks being to force the French to fall back out of the salient of which Rheims forms the apex.

On the eastern portion of the battlefield he is still making very little progress, and we now learn from the American communiqué that American troops are fighting here as well as in the neighborhood of Château-Thierry.

The attack against the mountain of Rheims has been more successful, and on this part of the battlefield the Germans have made their greatest progress, the depth of their advance being about six miles.

If they can extend their gain through and beyond Pourcy and bring up their guns to the western spurs of the Mountain of Rheims, they will be able to shell the approaches to the city from the south, and the French might then be forced to abandon it. This is at the present time the greatest danger which appears to threaten.

As I have already pointed out, this would not in any sense be a military disaster. The Germans must look for some much more important gain than the capture of a town which was, when the battle started, close behind the front line trenches.

Further to the south the enemy has been at his old game of trying to get his infantry forward down a valley, while he deluges the heights on either side with gas and high explosive shell.

In this way he has been seeking to make progress up the Marne toward Epernay and at one time had captured the village of Montvoisin, rather more than five miles from his starting point, but was promptly stopped by a French counterattack, which retook the village.

STEEL CURTAILMENT MENACES AUTO MEN

WASHINGTON, July 17. — Further drastic curtailment of the so-called lesser essential industries may result from the enlargement of the war program, the consequent increasing demand for steel, and existing shortage in the supply.

War requirements for the last six months of this year would be approximately 20,000,000 tons, the War Industries Board announced today. The greatest output of a like period for the steel industry was 16,600,000 tons, the board stated.

Automobile manufacturers, it was stated today, have asked the War Industries Board to allow them sufficient steel to produce 60 per cent. of their normal production of passenger cars. The board replied that it could not promise at most 25 per cent., and that possibly none at all could be granted.

The automobile manufacturers had a lively session with the War Industries Board at their conference yesterday, at which the board called on them to submit within two weeks a sworn inventory of steel and steel products now on hand. Men who participated in the conference said that it had been a heated one, in which the manufacturers predicted a dire outcome unless Director of Steel Supply Replogle granted to the passenger car makers enough steel to enable them to liquidate their present inventories.

War Industries Board members replied that ample warning of the curtailment had been given and told the automobile men that the supply of the American forces in France was the first consideration. Some of the conferees said it was pointed out to the automobile men that when the first warning was given some manufacturers took heed and placed themselves on a war basis, devoting 90 per cent. of their manufacturing capacity to war contracts. Those who faced a shutdown from curtailment of steel, it was stated, did so because they found passenger car contracts more profitable than war contracts.

Hugh Chalmers, representing the passenger car industry, told the board that many manufacturers had sufficient stocks of steel to carry them from four to six months along with the 1919 program. The present inventories, however, Mr. Chalmers said, were unbalanced and various kinds of steel were required to complete them. He asked that this steel be allowed, saying otherwise the industry would be faced with ruin.

WAR IS USELESS, BURIAN DECLARES

Allies Cannot Defeat Teutons, He Alleges, but Might Gain by Negotiations.

TRUSTS GERMAN ALLIANCE

WASHINGTON SEES SCHEME

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—The Austro-Hungarian Government regards the war as "senseless and purposeless bloodshed," and believes it may be ended at the moment when the Allies again manifest "feelings of humanity," Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, said in the concluding portion of his address to the Austrian and Hungarian Premiers Tuesday, according to dispatches from Vienna.

After asserting that the Allies would not succeed in their purpose of sowing discord among the nationalities in the Dual Monarchy, the Foreign Minister said:

"It is unnecessary further to characterize this method of fighting. Our races indignantly disavow it. The resolute battle of defense must now be carried on to a good end until it brings us the security necessary for our future peaceful existence."

The Foreign Minister said that warfare and diplomacy served the same end in time of war, adding:

"In every step it takes, diplomatic activity will pay due regard to the war. The results of the conduct of the war will have a determining influence on the division of labor. On the other hand, diplomacy has a duty, being continually on the watch and paying heed to the possibilities of effective activity.

"Thus and not otherwise should the willingness of the Central Powers for peace be conceived. It will not for the moment hamper the invincible defense, but after victorious battles, just as during pauses in a battle, it will, even without new peace offers, always be intent in recalling that we regard this war as senseless and purposeless bloodshed which might at any moment be ended by the re-emergence of feelings of humanity in our enemies.

"In so far as they are not aiming at the acquisition of territory, they are fighting against a windmill. They are exhausting their strength and ours in order to build on the ruins of civilization a new arrangement of the world, whereas the ideas underlying such an arrangement, which are capable of realization and which also are warmly approved by us, might be realized much more easily and much more completely by the peaceful co-operation of all peoples.

"In spite of all, we look ever more hopefully toward the peoples now at war with us to see whether at last they have been delivered from the blindness which, after fearful afflictions in four years of war, is driving the world ever further into that destruction which they can avert if they only will."

The Foreign Minister said that his confidence was based on the war alliances, particularly the old alliance with Germany. He asserted that Austria and Germany would seek means of extending the alliance, so that it would be adequate for all the requirements of new times.

"In these endeavors," he continued, "the Governments know they are in agreement with the desires of the preponderating mass of their people. The alliance will henceforth, as hitherto, preserve its exclusively defensive character. It will also rest firmly on the satisfactory solution of all questions and on the necessities of joint concern which have arisen from the war. It must, therefore, not only cover political relationships of the two powers, but must also lead to changes under altered conditions.

"Economic, military and other relations in the future are to be drawn closer. The agreement must comprise a solution, with due regard to the desires of the populations, of the questions connected with the rebirth of Poland.

"Henceforth the alliance will not mean a threat or unfriendliness toward anyone. Nothing will be included in it calculated to offer a stimulus to the formation of counter groups. Everything which in the future can be realized of the sublime idea of a universal league of nations shall find in our alliance no obstacle, but a favorable nucleus and a prepared group which can easily and naturally unite with every general combination of States resting on concrete principles."

Foreign Minister Burian said that Austria expected after the war to remain in closer relations with Turkey and Bulgaria.

After asserting that "the continuance of the war is due exclusively to the one-sided and destructive aims of the enemy, which can only be attained over the ruins of the world," the Foreign Minister concluded by quoting the final words of the reply of Emperor Charles to the Pope's peace note.

SEIDLER ATTACKS CZECH PROPAGANDA

Tells Reichsrat German Race Is Backbone of Austria—House to Debate Food.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—Dr. von Seidler, the Austrian Premier, delivered his expected address in the lower house of the Austrian Reichsrat yesterday, says a Vienna telegram. The Prime Minister was received by the Czechs with uproarious shouts and by the Germans with loud applause.

Speaking on the situation in Austria-Hungary, Dr. von Seidler said:

"The internal propaganda methods of our enemies are so absurd that they only testify to their profound ignorance of our conditions. These arrows will rebound against our unshakable devotion to the dynasty, the loyalty of our citizens to the State and the firm internal cohesion of our State within the framework of the monarchy.

"We should look cheerfully into the future. In unity with our loyal allies we shall be able to enforce the end of the world war.

"Our intimate community with them, which we hope to strengthen and extend for the future, especially the old and well-proved alliance with the German Empire, constitutes for us, as well as for our allies, the best guarantees that we shall maintain for all time our place among the States of the world and be able to insure for our peoples conditions of free and beneficent development. But they are far from constituting a menace to other States and will rather prove themselves to be a useful and effective link in shaping the future peaceful relations of a reconciled world."

Dr. von Seidler recalled the refusal of the Czech clubs to collaborate in revising the Constitution and said that if the Government was not to expose itself to the reproach of political passivity it had to put into effect its program of national autonomy. Hence the decrees for the partition of Bohemia into districts.

It was far from his intention to deny that this was a German course, Dr. von Seidler continued, because if there was a political force in Austria it could only be such as guaranteed the protection of the just interests of the German race. The backbone of this multiform State was the German race, and it would always be so. The Government would not be deflected from the course upon which it had entered.

For those parties which stood aloof, Dr. von Seidler added, the door of understanding was always open. Over this door, however, was written, "Welcome to all who are loyal to the dynasty and the State."

Declaring that the Government had no animosity toward other races, Dr. von Seidler said that all the Germans and Austrians demanded was to be allowed to live and develop in peace. The Government, he said, would also endeavor to do full justice to the national requirements of the races living in Galicia.

Dealing with the food situation, Dr. von Seidler said that the new harvest would be got in with the gratest expedition. The full yield of the harvest could not be distributed to a large portion of the population before the beginning of August.

The occasion of the speech was the reassembling of the lower house after a four months' recess. The galleries were crowded for the occasion.

President Gross, in welcoming the members, referred to the "regrettable interruption" in the activities of the House and expressed the hope that the present session would serve to safeguard and establish the Constitutional position.

The House, by a two-thirds majority, resolved immediately to begin the first reading of the provisional budget jointly with the discussion of urgent questions regarding various events of domestic and foreign policy, as well as the food situation.

WASHINGTON SCOFFS AT BURIAN FEELER

Believes It Was Timed for the Expected German Victory—Spurned by Czechs.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Baron Burian's carefully framed declaration on peace, it is unerstood here, will elicit no reply from President Wilson or any of the Allied statesmen, for the present, at least. Official circles in Washington are convinced that it was intended to open the way for peace negotiations in the event of success for the present German offensive, when, it was hoped by Teuton statesmen, that the spirit of the Allies would be broken.

Assertions by Baron Burian that he is almost in accord with the ideas advanced by President Wilson were characterized as designed "for home consumption" and to "deceive the people of Austria-Hungary, who are discontented and threaten revolution," in a statement tonight by Professor Voyslav M. Yovanowitch, who is in the United States on a special mission for the Serbian Government.

"Baron Burian," said the statement, "tries not so much to make a sort of 'peace offensive' into our camp as—driven with his back to the wall—to defend himself against the rising tide of the peace offensive coming from our side, the growing murmur of discontent and almost of revolution from the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary, the Czechoslovaks, Southern Slavs, Italians, Rumanians, and Poles.

A study of the Burian note by the officials here reveals nothing new in substance. Aside from the evident purpose to make it easy for the Entente Powers to discuss peace by means of polite language and apparently reasonable terms, the note is taken to indicate a growing fear on the part of the Austrian Government of the subversive effect of the propaganda which American agents, particularly, and the Italians and French in a less degree, are conducting among the Jugoslavs, Czechoslavoks, and other nationalities in the Dual Empire, which have little in common with the controlling Germanic Party.

Thus Baron Burian's argument is directed to meet the American assertion of the right of self-regeneration of small nations. It is gathered from reading between the lines of his note that he is quite willing that this principle of self-regeneration should be applied to the peoples in Entente countries, but reserves to the Austrian and German Governments the right to absolute control of the subjugated nations within their borders. In this he follows the principle laid down by the Germans who negotiated the Brest-Litovsk treaty by which Russia was torn to pieces.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS AGAIN SEEK A PARLEY

"Particularly" Interested in Attendance of Americans, Says Message to Huysmans.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—Vorwärts of Berlin publishes a communication addressed to Camille Huysmans of Belgium, Secretary of the Socialist Internationale, by the party executive of the German Social Democracy, repeating the party's willingness to participate in an international conference in a neutral country. The communication adds:

"Particularly do we assume that representatives of the American Socialists, who always have been present at recent congresses of the Internationale, are being invited."

The communication says that the German Socialist Party, through its speakers, has always expressed itself in favor of a peace by understanding, without annexations or contributions, on the basis of the self-determination of the rights of peoples. It says, finally, regarding the Eastern question:

"You have assuredly seen from reports of the Reichstag proceedings that the Social Democratic Party has emphatically championed its social democratic views."

DELBRUECK FOR FREE BELGIUM

Wants Germany to Reinstate Nation Without Conditions.

LONDON, July 17.—German newspapers give prominence to an interesting statement on Belgium by Professor Hans Delbrück in the Neues Weiner Journal, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam. The statement reads:

"Germany now will lose nothing by declaring her readiness to evacuate Belgium without conditions and to reinstate her in independence and integrity. Germany has plenty of other safeguards. Belgium is not only a German question; it is a world question.

"No peace is possible in the world unless Belgium is as free as before the war. Even America has the greatest interest in Belgium. Until Belgium becomes free the world cannot accept even the indirect rule of Germany over her."

WILLING TO EXCHANGE BELGIUM FOR COLONIES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 17.—The correspondent of The Daily Express at Amsterdam says:

"Germany is ready to evacuate Belgium tomorrow on this single all-important condition: Germany must have her colonies back, and the ways leading from Germany to her colonies must be reopened."

This is the statement which the semi-official Wolff Bureau circulates in Germany as coming from the Imperial Chancellor, speaking to a Scandinavian journalist.

According to today's Vorwärts, such a statement, if not discredited by the Chancellor, is "worth looking into by the Allies, as it shows that the French and British fear of another Brest-Litovsk is absolutely unfounded."

The statement has not so far been denied, and the fact that the Wolff Bureau issues it seems to prove that it was actually made, either by the Chancellor or by some one speaking in his name at his request.

GERMAN HATE NOW TURNED ON AMERICA

Press Lets Loose a Broadside of Vituperation and Ridicule Against Us.

SAYS WAR IS NOT POPULAR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 17.—The German press is obviously endeavoring to ridicule everything American. The Kölnische Zeitung comments on THE NEW YORK TIMES article of June 2, in which it stated that the Germans shelled Paris on Holy Trinity Day in spite of Cardinal Hartmann's petition to refrain from bombing Cologne. It refers to a statement made in the Reichstag that the French celebrated the festival on the following Sunday, adding that THE TIMES evidently was ignorant of such details, but that even if it were not this would not prevent it from carrying on its work of incitement.

The Kölnische Zeitung also comments on an Associated Press report of June 13 and on an official report of George Creel's Press Bureau, which it quotes in full. The paper says that when this whole printing and publishing apparatus is taken into consideration it may be concluded that President Wilson could not continue the war one day longer without it, as the people would not support him.

"A nation which knows what it is fighting for," it continues, "needs no explanatory speeches, articles, and films. All this shows how necessary they are."

The article bears the headline, "The American Bladder Bag of War Enthusiasm."

The Rhenish Gazette comments on "America's pamphlet propaganda." Otto Kahn, who was well known as a confidential man of big German finance before the war, it says, now issues pamphlets telling German soldiers at the front that Prussia is the ruling caste in Germany. Yet Mr. Kahn knows that Germany is flourishing under Prussian rule. President Wilson's drastic measures against everything German, it goes on, show that there are not many German-Americans who share Kahn's view and that German soldiers will not be influenced by such ridiculous pamphlets, especially as Kahn & Co. have never been true Germans.

Another article tells how the British and Americans are now working together on propaganda and using baloons, which it says imparts an American touch. "Another interesting fact," it continues, "is that Wilson, who is less capable of personally leading troops than his predecesor Roosevelt, is taking an active part in the paper offensive."

The paper alleges that orders which were issued on Jan. 25 by French Headquarters were found by German troops. In these orders, it says, President Wilson expresses a wish that 1,000,000 copies of his speech be distributed in the German trenches. The article adds that the Entente errs if it imagines that it will have more success with a peace offensive under the personal direction of Wilson.

To Economize on Auto Service.

HARTFORD, July 17.—Reforms in the operation and repair of automobiles used for pleasure purposes only have been suggested by the Connecticut Council of Defense in a letter sent throughout the State today. Dealers are asked to instruct owners how to make minor repairs and adjustments and to watch tires for signs of injury. They also are requested to discontinue free service cards, to sell labor and materials only on a cash basis, and to avoid wastage of gasoline, oil, and other material.

MEANS ADMITS ACTING AS GERMANY'S AGENT

Asserts Some Prominent New York Lawyers Also Were in Kaiser's Pay.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Admissions that he had served as a secret agent of Germany before the United States entered the war, and allegations that some of New York's most prominent lawyers had done as he did, were made today by Gaston B. Means in testimony at the hearing to determine the legality of one of two wills, purporting to dispose of the $3,000,000 estate left by James C. King of Chicago.

Means, who appeared as a witness for the heirs of Mrs. Maude A. King, for whose alleged slaying he was tried and acquitted in Concord, N. C., last Summer, freely admitted receiving money for acting as a secret agent of the German Government before the outbreak of the war with the United States. Quietly he told of receiving $85,000 at one time and $92,000 at another for his services to Germany, and of delivering $1,300,000 which he received on a check to Captain Boy-Ed, the German Naval Attaché and one of Germany's chief spies in this country, who was subsequently expelled.

Asked regarding the services for which he received $92,000, Means said:

"I made the money the way lots of other Americans did, some of them the biggest lawyers in New York. I can easily tell you the place where I called for it—right in the Trinity Church yard at a designated tombstone."

The witness also admitted that he and German spies in this country were to tie up the building of electric boats, the "mosquito fleet" building for the Allies in this country. Means said that he found that the boats had gun emplacements and that Captain Boy-Ed called this to the attention of the Neutrality Board at Washington.

"President Wilson then very properly asked him why he was doing detective work in the United States," declared Means. "And now for the first time the public knows why Captain Boy-Ed was sent back to Germany. I turned all my information over to the Government."

7 IN BATTLE FLIGHT TO PHILADELPHIA

MISHAPS PREVENT RETURN

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., July 17.—Seven aviators of the First Provisional Wing unit, who have volunteered to fly the first fleet of bombing machines across the Atlantic, today began a series of long-distance flights in battle formation by flying to Philadelphia from the army aviation field here. It was their intention to fly back to their field this afternoon, but mishaps to two of the machines upon landing and the bad flying weather reported by the New York-Washington aerial mail fliers caused the dispatch of orders for them to put their machines in hangars to await better weather. Permission was also given them to fly over Philadelphia in practice observation.

Most of the aviators in the Provisional Wing have already made several long-distance cross-country flights, but until today they had not flown long distances in battle formation. They have been practicing in the formations for several weeks and have flown over New York City in their battle evolutions on the Fourth of July, Bastile Day, and over the funeral cortege of Major Mitchel. Because of the difficulty of retaining the exact formation at great speed, the aviators have been training slowly, and it was not until today that the instructors here decided that the men should retain their unit formation in a long flight. In their other flights they had taken battle formation only over the city, and had flown to and from the field as individual machines.

A few minutes after the eight machines had taken to the air at 8:10 this morning they circled and formed in battle lines, or in the "flying goose," as some of them call it. Then they sailed away with the leader, Lieutenant L. S. Reitenbaugh, in command, and accompanied by Captain A. J. Boyrerven, a French pilot.

One of the secondary objects of the flight was to enable aerial observers in the planes to pick out sites for landing fields for the New York-Washington aerial mail, so that the machines may have clear spaces to land when they have engine trouble. The observers were ordered to make maps and photographs during the flight for the postal authorities directing the aerial mail.

Other longer flights will be taken by the Provisional Wings to train them for bombing expeditions, reconnoissance, air fighting, and patrol duty, as well as for the proposed Atlantic flight. Some of the other flights may be made in the American-built Caproni and other large planes, while a formation flight may be made later with the Caproni and the huge Handley-Page bombing machine that aviators from the army fields here are studying now at Elizazeth, N. J., with a squadron of the smaller mattleplanes as guards.

Captain Boyrerven was to alternate with American aviators in leading the squadron on the flight today. The Americans who flew were: Lieutenants Reitenbaugh, J. P. Boyd, S. M. Connell, H. C. King, M. B. Kelleher, J. H. Pearson, and H. C. Garratt. All of their machines were American-built and equipped with Liberty motors.

Two other aviators of the Wing unit also left the field for a flight to Rochester, N. Y., in tests of new airplane apparatus, and officers at the field said that they would return tomorrow. They were Lieutenants U. G. Jones and J. I. Moore. It was reported to the field that one of the men had descended on the Finley J. Shepard estate at Tarrytown, N. Y., and it was learned later that the aviator was Cadet T. N. Miller, who had been forced to the ground by a split propeller while he was on a short practice flight.

Lieutenant C. P. Culver came within three minutes of the aerial mail record between Philadelphia and Belmont Field today, carrying a passenger and 180 pounds of mail in a heavy rain and thunderstorm. The record is 42 minutes, and he flew the ninety miles in 45 minutes.

MILUKOFF REPORT REACHES THE SWISS

"Ukrainian Bureau" Circulates Rumor That Russian Leader Has Gone Over to the Foe

WITH TWO COLLEAGUES

Quoted as Saying He Preferred a German-Protected Russia to One Bolshevized and Divided.

By JULIUS WEST.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 17. — The Ukrainian Bureau at Lausanne has received a somewhat startling piece of news from Kiev. Its source dispels doubt as to the genuineness of the information, although on the face of it the news is extraordinarily curious. Put briefly, it amounts to this: Milukoff and two other prominent members of the Cadet Party, Nabokoff and Vonaver, have gone over to the Germans.

The circumstances attending the conversion of these three hitherto stanch pro-Allies give the affair an appearance of truth.

The Cadet Party throughout Russia has been for the last year thoroughly anti-German, insisting that Russia must be one and indivisible. The Ukranian Cadets, however, after the breakdown, assisted by Germany, of the Socialist Government of Golubvovitch at the end of April, proceeded to take the principal part in the formation of a new Government, thereby admitting Ukrainian independence and abandoning their traditional program. The party upheld their action at a conference held at Kiev in the middle of May.

In the meantime a number of Russians living in the Crimea, a place of refuge from Bolshevism, declared the Crimea an independent State, and formed a Government wherein Cadets also predominated. Here, as in Ukraine, the Germans helped the Cadets. Milukoff arrived in the Crimea and approved the arrangement. He and the two others then went to Kiev and gave the Cadet Government the blessing of the leader of the party.

Although he appears to have made it clear that he represents a minority of the Cadets outside Ukraine he nevertheless went so far as to declare publicly that Germany alone could save Russia from the Bolsheviki, and he had an interview with Baron von Mumm, the German Minister at Kiev. I am told that Milukoff says he prefers to see Russia one and indivisible under a German protectorate than as several States divided and belonging to everybody and nobody.

I cannot help remembering that Milukoff told me just a year ago that the idea of Ukrainian independence was purely artificial and nourished only on Austrian money and propaganda. Now he apparently regards independent Ukraine as a Russian Piedmont, with a difference.

One can understand a man of Milukoff's energetic temperament being driven by hatred of Bolshevism and resentment at the prospect of his own political annihilation at its hands into erratic courses regardless of their effects upon the conduct of the war, or even the future of Russian civilization, but his defection will grieve many who regarded him as the strongest support of the Entente in Russia.

Blow to the Allies, if True.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 17.—If the news of Milukoff's going over to Germany, which must still be accepted with some reserve, is true, it certainly means a serious blow to the allied cause in Russia. Milukoff has always been one of the most stubborn and consistent friends of the Allies, particularly of England. His defection to the Germans, if it has taken place, must be regarded as an act of despair.

Only a short time ago Kerensky told me that Milukoff, who was living in the south of Russia, had sent a message to his party in Moscow to the effect that, if ever they yielded to German blandishments, he would leave the party. He took a prominent part in the Alexieff-Korniloff movement on the Don and has since apparently lived in the south of Russia, where, shut off from communication with the west, he was unable to follow and appreciate the movement for allied military help.

Milukoff is a stubborn man with great strength of will and wide knowledge of European politics, but there are curious breaks in his character and more than once in his career he has committed fatal errors by completely misjudging a situation at the critical moment.

The main body of the Cadet Party in Moscow and Petrograd seems to be still stanch in its loyalty to the allied cause and is still looking for aid. Nabokoff went to the Crimea soon after the Bolshevist revolution. Vonaver, who is much more of an opportunist than either of the other two, spent several months in seclusion in a sanatorium at Moscow. It is Milukoff's way to work according to very intricate plans, and he may have an intricate plan now. At any rate the news is another strong argument for intervention. There are not so many capable public men in Russia that we can afford to drive them into association with Germany by long delay in helping to bring order into the terrible chaos.

Report Doubted in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—In the absence of any authentic information on the subject, the report attributed to the Ukrainian News Bureau that former Minister Milukoff and two other prominent members of the Russian Cadet Party had gone over to the Germans is doubted here.

The report had been heard before and was then attributed to German propaganda. The fact that Germany is able to exercise control over the Ukrainian News Bureau bears out that belief. All the men here who were associated with Milukoff in the Russian revolution are opposed to German rule and the Bolsheviki, and they say it would be strange if he made terms with the Germans.

FRANCIS MESSAGE INCENSES GERMANS

July 4 Statement to Russians Said to Mean New War on Teutons in the East.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—The Independence Day message of David R. Francis, the American Ambassador at Moscow, to the Russian people, moves the Berlin Vorwärts to the following strong comment:

"This is a straight blow in the face of the Soviet Government, which can be hereafter under no misapprehension as to what to expect in the present and future from the United States. It is nothing but a blunt intentional provocation, and nothing remains for the Soviet Government but to demand the recall of the Ambassador."

Such a demand the Vorwärts, however, considers would probably end as did a similar demand in the case of the French Ambassador, Joseph Noulens, last May, when in an interview he justified the landing of Japanese troops at Vladivostok. Nothing happened, the newspaper says, and Ambassador Noulens joined the North Russian counter-revolutionaries.

The importance of the American Ambassador's action to Germany, according to Vorwärts, is that the war is to blaze up again in the East and that German statesmanship is to be faced with the most difficult task of enforcing the Brest-Litovsk peace agreement. Not a moment must be lost, Vorwärts concludes.

The Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin says:

"When the American Ambassador speaks of liberating all the Slav peoples he means the tearing away of Germany's eastern provinces and the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary, heedless of the actual war situation and our right to live. The German sword must hack through this wall of unreasonable hatred."

CZECHS EXTENDING GAINS IN SIBERIA

Follow Irkutsk Victory by Occupying Klutshevsk, 550 Miles to the Eastward.

PEKING, July 15, (Associated Press.)—The town of Klutshevsk, in the southwestern extremity of the Transbaikal region, (on the Transsiberian railroad, 550 miles east of Irkutsk,) has been occupied by the Czechoslovak forces, fol- railroad, 175 miles east of Irkutsk.)

A dispatch from Manchuria announces that General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevist leader, has occupied Sharasun (near the western border of Manchuria) with his forces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, July 17.—A telegram has been received at Urga from Omsk reporting that the Bolsheviki are fleeing from Moscow to Kazan.

The Czechoslovaks occupied Irkutsk on Saturday. Generals Kolcyak and Semenoff are carrying on an offensive and have defeated the Bolsheviki at the Deauria Station.

LONDON, July 17.—Reports received in Tokio state that the Bolshevist leaders in the Irkutsk region have taken alarm at the coup executed by the anti-Bolshevist elements at Vladivostok and are preparing to flee toward Mongolia, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tien-tsin.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—Premier Lenine is about to break off diplomatic relations with Great Britain and any other Entente power connected with the landing of armed forces on the Murman coast, according to news said to have been received from Moscow by Berlin newspapers.

A dispatch received in London on Monday from Moscow by way of Amsterdam reported that American and British troops had occupied the entire Murman coast. An earlier dispatch on the same date said that the Russian Foreign Office had sent to Great Britain a demand that British detachments on the Murman coast be re-embarked without delay.

The allied troops on the Murman coast are there at the express request of the Russian population. The local population has been aiding the troops in defending the ice-free harbors and the railway running south toward Petrograd. German and Finnish forces have been reported to be threatening the Murman Railway near Kem.

TO HOLD ALAND PRISONERS.

Americans, French, and British Remain in German Custody.

STOCKHOLM, July 17.—The American Legation has been informed by the Finnish Government that Germany, in reply to Finnish representations regarding French, British, and American civil prisoners captured by the Germans on the Aland Islands, in the Baltic Sea, has decided that they will be held by Germany in exchange for German civil prisoners in Entente countries.

AGREEMENT ON PRISONERS.

Terms Reached by British and Germans for Exchanges.

THE HAGUE, July 17.—The text of the agreement between the British and German delegations for the exchange of prisoners, which was signed on July 14, contains provisions for the exchange of officers, non-commissioned officers and men—British and German prisoners of war—and those interned in Holland, as well as civilians interned in Holland and Switzerland. The latter will leave the country where they are interned.

The new arrangement provides that non-commissioned officers will be exchanged direct, instead of being interned. German and British prisoners of war and civilians interned in Holland will leave that country, while their places will be taken by officers who have been prisoners for more than eighteen months, and other prisoners in poor health.

The number of persons to be interned, in accordance with the agreement of 1917, amounts to about 7,500 sick or wounded British officers and about 2,500 German officers.

Italians Repel Repeated Attacks—British Make Successful Raid.

ROME, July 17.—The official communication from Italian Headquarters today says:

On Monday evening a British detachment penetrated the enemy's lines southeast of Asiago. Heavy losses were inflicted on the garrison, and twenty-four prisoners were taken.

Repeated enemy attacks yesterday resulted in lively activity between the southeastern slopes of Sasso Rosso and the Brenta. North of Grappa the enemy heavily stormed our advanced lines south of Col Tosson, but was driven back.

Two hostile airplanes were brought down.

PAPER TURNS ON GERMANY.

The Germania of Milwaukee Retracts Its Previous Utterances.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 17.—Germania, a local semi-weekly newspaper and one of the most widely circulated German language newspapers in America, came out in its issue yesterday in strong condemnation of the German Government in connection with the origin and conduct of the world war.

It retracts words uttered during the course of the war, and admits that, parrot-like, it repeated the utterances of the German Government's newspaper organs.

FAMOUS GENERALS DEFEND RHEIMS

BERTHELOT WEST OF CITY

WITH THE FRENCH FORCES IN FRANCE, July 17, (Associated Press.)—General Gouraud, the hero of the Dardanelles, was the French commander who barred the advance of the German Crown Prince in the Champagne. It was he who, east of Rheims, in one day brought the host of Germans to a standstill. This was done with only comparatively insignificant losses among his own men in consequence of his admirable defensive preparations.

About twenty enemy divisions have been identified in the first lines of this sector of the front alone. By the end of the first day of fighting half of these divisions had been badly mauled. The precaution the French had taken before the Teuton offensive began was such that the Germans were unable to capture a single prisoner in the Champagne during the several days preceding the attack. The Germans thus were deprived of the possibility of obtaining information regarding the French plans.

PARIS, July 17.—After being permitted to print the information last night that General Gouraud of Dardanelles fame was commanding the French sector between Rheims and Massiges, the Paris newspapers today are allowed to reveal the fact that General Henri Berthelot, who headed the French military mission to Rumania, is now commanding the Franco-Italian army in the sector between the Marne and Rheims.

General Gouraud is one of the younger men whom Joffre selected during the early part of the war for important commands. While holding a sector in the Argonne Forest he earned the title of "Lion of the Argonne." In 1915 he was placed in command of the French Expeditionary Forces in the Gallipoli campaign, in which he lost an arm and was badly wounded in the right thigh.

The larger part of his military experience has been in the French colonies. As early as 1896 he took part in the Sudan campaign, and attracted attention in operations against the Touareg tribe. Having been made a Captain on the field, he took part in the assaults against Bangassi, and in the fights to raise the siege of Kong. Later he was put in command of a detachment that was to pursue Samory, a native chieftain, who was subsequently captured at the Camp of Quelemon. In 1907 he was made a Colonel, and a command was given to him in Mauritania in Africa, and five years later he was promoted to be a Brigadier General as a reward for his services in the fights at Fez.

At the outset of the present war he had risen to the rank of Divisionary General, and after spending most of the Winter in the Argonne district, he was selected to command an army corps in the Eastern Expeditionary Force that was formed in Morocco under General d'Amade. In June, 1915, he succeeded General d'Amade. A month later at Gallipoli a bursting shell inflicted the wounds that necessitated his return to France and the amputation of his arm.

General Berthelot, who, in the Autumn of 1916, was in command of the French military mission in Rumania, was spoken of by Queen Mary in an article of thanks to France, published in Le Figaro, as "General Berthelot, the glorious victor of the Labyrinth and Le Mort Homme, whom we love as a national hero."

The first referred to an episode in the French offensive in Artois in May and June, 1915. Berthelot was then in command of a brigade incorporated in the 10th Army under General de Maudhuy which faced the 7th German Army under the Crown Prince of Bavaria. Between Carency and Neuville-St. Vaast was a terrain on which the Germans had molded "pill boxes" for the first time over an area of 600 square meters. It was a formidable position, and caused the French many casualties in their attacks upon Neuville-St. Vaast on May 15-25, and upon Ablain-St. Nazaire at the end of the month.

Berthelot, with three regiments, was ordered to take this fortification which the Allies had, meanwhile, nicknamed "The Labyrinth." He made his first assault on May 30 and was driven back. Other regiments were sent him and he daily renewed the attack until, on June 17, his men, stripped to the waist on account of the heat, obtained a foothold on the outer works. For two days they fought from redoubt to redoubt, until on the 19th a clever rear attack caused the surviving Germans to surrender. For this achievement Berthelot was made General of Division and oredred to a command under General Roques (the Third Army) on the heights of the Meuse.

When the Imperial Crown Prince began the Verdun offensive in the following February, Berthelot, with one division, between Bethincourt and Forges, received the shock of the 11th and 12th Reserve Divisions and part of the 6th Reserve Corps. From March to July, 1916, he lost and regained several times the positions of Cumières and Hill 295, with its spur, Le Mort Homme, and, finally, held the hill and spur until ordered to the command of the French Mission in Rumania. After the capitulation of Rumania to the invading Teutons he was sent on a mission to Russia.

General Berthelot is well known to officers of the United States Army in Washington, which he visited on June 15 last, being presented to President Wilson by Ambassador Jusserand. He was received at the White House as the General who was in immediate support of Marshal Joffre in the battle of the Marne in 1914. His designation to come to America to confer with military leaders of this country was regarded as an especial mark of honor.

While in Washington General Berthelot participated in an appeal to the Administration for military intervention in Russia. He urged it as a means of solving the Russian situation, which he felt could not be overcome except by assistance from the Allies.

He left Washington only three weeks ago, having been recalled by the military command in France. The first news of him since has come in the French repulse of the German drive.

China Has Decided on Plan—Parliamentary Elections Held.

PEKING, July 17.—The Chinese Government has decided to appoint a Minister to the Vatican. It is probable that Thai Chen-ling, now Minister to Madrid, will be appointed to the new post.

Parliamentary elections have been concluded, except in the five rebellious provinces, showing a majority of the Anfu or Military Party representatives elected. The Government has ordered elections for the five rebellious provinces to be held in Tientsin. Parliament opens in Peking on Aug. 10.

Che-Kiang troops have recaptured Tapu in Fukien, effecting a junction with the Fukien troops at Chaoan. They are preparing a general attack upon Kwan-Tung. A Hankow message reports that owing to hot weather the fighting between Government troops and the rebels in Western Hupeh has been suspended.

The Dalai Lama is reported as directing the Tibetan revolt, being assisted by Indians acting unofficially.

JUSSERAND THANKS US.

Says Manifestations on Bastile Day Are Appreciated by France.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Ambassador Jusserand of France issued a statement today thanking the associations and citizens of America who through him expressed to France their friendship on the occasion of the celebration in this country of Bastile Day.

"Unable to send the expression of his thanks personally to the numerous associations and citizens who through him expressed to France their hearts' sentiment toward the old ally once more fighting with America for a sacred cause," said the statement, "the French Ambassador begs to gratefully state that the unexampled manifestations of July 14 have made of that day one of the great dates in the history of the two nations.

"Confidently awaiting the time near at hand through our common exertions when right shall triumph, we reciprocate the noble words of President Wilson and say in our turn 'the sea seems very narrow today, America is so close a neighbor to our hearts.'"

WIRE CONTROL IS AT HAND.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—An order by President Wilson taking over trunk line, telephone, and telegraph systems and delegating control of them to Postmaster General Burleson is expected today or tomorrow. Arrangements for Government operation of the lines virtually are completed, but there will be no announcement of details until the President's order is issued.

It is understood that plans of the Government contemplate consolidation of the telegraph and telephone systems, so that telephone trunk lines may be used simultaneously for messages and conversations. Another feature of the program is the acceptance of telegrams at Post Offices and the elimination of bookkeeping by the use of stamps to pay for messages.

The firm will build steel vessels for the French Government. The building of docks and yards has already begun.

GERMAN AIRMEN AIMED TO HIT OUR HOSPITAL

PARIS, July 17.—Two German airplanes took part in the deliberate bombing of the American Red Cross hospital at Jouy late Monday night. An investigation of the affair has been made at the request of Harvey D. Gibson, American Red Cross Commissioner for France, by Daniel T. Pierce of the Committee on Public Information.

The report shows that four bombs were dropped at 11 o'clock at night. Two fell squarely on tents, one fell seven feet from a tent, and the fourth failed to explode.

There are no buildings of any kind near the hospital and the nearest railroad is three kilometers away. In addition to the usual Red Cross markings a large cross 100 feet long was in position on the lawn. Photographs taken recently from airplanes show that the cross was visible several thousand feet in the air.

Seven witnesses agree that the German aviators flew back and forth several times. They then shut off their engines, dropped to within a few hundred feet, and let go their bombs after a careful observation. The German aim was good, but fortunately only two enlisted men were killed and nine of the hospital personnel wounded.

Two pieces of a bomb went through a window and passed within four feet of the surgeon in charge, who was performing a difficult operation. When the bombs fell all the lights went out, leaving the operating tables in darkness, and the surgeon with great difficulty was able to give the patient temporary relief. Another piece of bomb tore open the chest of an orderly as he was raising a patient to give him a drink.

One of the nine hospital attendants wounded lost a leg, amputation being performed Tuesday. A private from Philadelphia was struck by a piece of bomb at almost the identical spot on his back from which a piece of shrapnel had been removed a few hours previously.

A fragment of steel traversed the entire length of a tent only a few inches over the heads of a long row of surgical and gas cases, went through the end wall of the tent and struck a nurse who was standing outside. She was not wounded severely.

The hospital until recently had sixty German wounded prisoners among its patients. They received exactly the same treatment as the other patients, and even had special Fourth of July delicacies. All the Germans were grateful, except a Lieutenant, who objected violently to being placed in the same ward with his men.

WANTED 'UNBIASED' PAPER, SAYS NISSEN

Jeweler Declares He Dropped Out and Believed German Government Abandoned Project.

The story of a meeting at the home of Percival Kuhne, at which the plan of German sympathizers to purchase a newspaper printed in the English language was discussed, was told yesterday by Ludwig Nissen, President of the jewelry firm of Ludwig Nissen & Co., and a Director in many other corporations. Mr. Nissen is a former President of the National Jewelers Board of Trade, and a Director of the American Jewelers' Protective Association. The fact that Mr. Nissen might know something concerning the effort made to purchase an English language newspaper by persons friendly to Germany was intimated in newspapers yesterday morning, which intimation caused Mr. Nissen to issue his statement.

"Immediately after the beginning of the European war," Mr. Nissen said, "it was felt by many people who at that time sympathized with the cause of Germany that the American press was publishing one-sided and biased news. Some one, I don't know who, conceived the idea of acquiring a New York newspaper, printed in the English language, so that in it might be published unbiased and truthful news regarding the conflict between the two groups of belligerents in Europe.

"Very early in the year 1915 I was one day visited by a gentleman of the name of Davis, asking me to attend a conference of a few people at the home of Percival Kuhne for the discussion of such an enterprise. I at first remonstrated against acceptance of the invitation, but upon serious urging I consented to attend the conference. There were about six or seven people at the conference, including Count von Bernstorff. But it broke up without any action being taken. There never was another conference of the same group, but a smaller group, of which I was one, continued to discuss the acquisition of The Evening Mail.

No Subscriptions Made.

"This was to be done by subscriptions of individuals. No subscription, however, was ever made by any one, as far as I know, because it had been considered as to what support would be given this enterprise by the German Government, there never being any concrete statement made as to what that support would be. I personally dropped out of any further consideration of the matter before the end of February. The matter then assumed the shape that one certain individual was to acquire The Mail in the interests of the impartial publication of unbiased news.

"I left New York and went South. Some time after my return Dr. Rumely introduced himself to me, and made the statement that he had acquired The Mail with the backing of some very influential and rich individual. At that time, and ever since, I was under the impression that the representatives of the German Government had dropped out of all consideration of the matter, and that The Mail had been acquired as a purely private enterprise. I cannot now say how I obtained the impression. But from that time until October or November of last year I understood that Henry Ford of automobile fame was the individual.

"In October or November last I was told by Dr. Rumely that that was not the case. He mentioned the individual who had become his backer, but that individual had died. He said he had to make a settlement with the estate, and that he wished to sell some bonds of the property in order to facilitate that settlement. Upon the inducement of acquiring a profitable and safe investment I bought a small number of the bonds.

"It should seem obvious to all thinkers that if I had had the slightest idea of the German Government having any interest in the paper I should never have acquired the bonds. It should seem further obvious to all thinkers that the very fact of being asked to acquire a small number of the bonds would be evidence to me that the German Government had nothing to do with The Mail. For it would have been, in my judgment, unnecessary for the Government to have peddled around its securities in small lots."

Dr. Edward A. Rumely appeared before United States Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday and waived his privilege of a hearing. Commissioner Hitchcock continued the $35,000 bail and directed that the case be held for the Federal Grand Jury. Dr. Rumely made no statement.

Meanwhile the Federal Grand Jury on the floor above was examining witnesses in the German propaganda case. C. A. Lewis, Treasurer of The Mail while Rumely was the publisher, was in the Grand Jury room, as was Frank Lamdin, an auditor. Lamdin is said to have been the man who investigated and reported on the value of The Mail property to Rumely in 1915, prior to the purchase of the paper by the Germans.

"On Very Private Business."

The examination of witnesses by representatives of Attorney General Lewis was also continued yesterday, and during the day half a dozen persons were ushered into the examination room. George Sylvester Viereck, who published the pro-German weekly, The Fatherland, was there for a second examination. He was told to return today.

"Would you mind stating the reason of your visit to the Attorney General?" Mr. Viereck was asked as he was leaving the office.

"Oh no, not at all," he replied, "I am here on very private business."

"Is it permissible for you to indicate what you said when examined last Sunday?" he was asked.

"It all concerned ancient history," he replied.

It was also said that a matter which may be made the subject of inquiry is an organization formed in this country in 1914 and was known as the "Bund Eisernen Kreuzes Deutscher Patrioten in Amerika" or the "League of the Iron Cross of German Patriots in America." Christ Rebhan was the Chairman, Dr. Gustav Scholer the Treasurer, and George von Skal, former managing editor of the Staats-Zeitung and subsequently a confidential assistant of Captain von Papen, the Secretary. The league was formed, according to its certificate of membership, "for the support of the surviving dependents of German heroes who had given their lives for the Fatherland," and the membership certificates were issued "in grateful acknowledgment of a voluntary contribution for the lightening of the war burdens" of Germans.

The certificates were elaborate affairs, in colors. In the upper right-hand corner was a picture of the imperial ensign of the Hohenzollerns, in the lower right-hand corner appeared the imperial coat of arms, in the upper left-hand corner the American Union Jack, and in the lower left the coat of arms of the United States. At the top and in the middle of the certificate were the shields of Germany and the United States separated by a sword. Five pictures of the iron cross appear on the certificate, while the silver seal also shows the cross.

The organization is said to have issued more than 100,000 of these certificates to Germans, German-Americans, and German sympathizers in all parts of the United States. Mr. von Skal, as Secretary of the organization, is said to be in possession of the documents belonging to the organization.

AUSTRIAN COUNTESS ARRESTED

The Countess Alexandra Viarda von Scheele, said to be a friend of Count von Bernstorff, was arrested yesterday by agents of the Department of Justice and is now held a prisoner at Bellevue Hospital. The Countess, who is about 50 years old, is a subject of Austria-Hungary, and came to the United States soon after the war began. Immediately on her arrival she is said to have communicated with the embassies of the Central Powers in Washington. One of her friends is said to be Dr. Friedrich Richard von Strensch, who was arrested on Monday and who is now held in Raymond Street Jail pending an investigation.

Although a subject of Austria-Hungary the Countess is said to have been born in Posen, Germany, and was for many years a prominent actress in Germany and Austria. She has spent much of the last twenty-two years in this country, she said yesterday, and she gave Mrs. Frederick McAllister of Great Neck, L. I., as her best friend in this country. It was said at the Federal Building that as soon as her health permits the Countess will be arraigned before Rufus W. Sprague of the Enemy Alien Bureau for examination.

Arthur Roth, a Norwegian subject, recently wrote a letter to a friend in Philadelphia in the course of which he expressed the hope that some of the American transports would be sunk by the Germans. At the end of the letter he asked his friend to destroy the letter, and added that if the authorities came into possession of it he might get two years in prison. He received a sentence of five years yesterday, and will leave for the penitentiary at Atlanta today or tomorrow.

Roth arrived in this country in June of last year, and until his arrest a few days ago was employed by an insurance company. In his letter he also wrote "Being a citizen of a neutral country, I do not think they can compel me to work for the United States as an ammunition maker or shipyard worker. Not on your life. I have German blood in me. I feel that they will get me some day if I don't get away in time. It looks like they are going to call everybody to the colors, whether they are neutrals or not." Roth also referred to what he termed the "crazy call of the Liberty Bell." He said he could fancy seeing the Germans marching up Broadway with General Pershing a prisoner and the German bands playing "The Watch on the Rhine."

Jacob Ferdinand Kuhn, an airplane mechanic, who was recently returned to this country by the Governor General of the Panama Canal Zone, was ordered interned yesterday. Kuhn was formerly in the regular army and was for a time instructor in aviation camps at San Diego, Cal, and San Antonio, Texas. His internment was approved by the Federal authorities of New Jersey.

A story was current in the Federal Building yesterday that Mme. Marie K. Victorica, the German now under indictment for treasonable activities in this country as an official German spy, was dangerously ill in the Government Hospital on Ellis Island. Assistant United States District Attorney Ben A. Matthews asked for a report as to her condition and was assured her illness was not serious. Mme. Victorica was arrested several weeks ago. She came to this country in January, 1917, and is said to have operated with Commander Karl Rodiger of the German Navy, who is also under indictment as a spy. Jeremiah A. O'Leary, John T. Ryan, the Buffalo lawyer, and Emil Kipper are named as co-defendants with the Germans in the indictments.

SCOUTS VAIN HOPES IN MITTELEUROPA

CALLS PROJECT TEMPORARY

Germany's Full Economic Recovery, He Says, Must Come from World Connections.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 17.—Weltwirtschaft, Ubergangswirtschaft, Mitteleuropa, and last, but not least, raw materials are positive obsessions in the German press. Philipp Heineken, Director of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company and prominent member of the Hanseatic economic movement, publishes an article in the Weser-Zeitung on the German and Austro-Hungarian League-in-Arms, saying that too much hope has been based on the catchword Mitteleuropa and its economic possibilities, and that the non-realization of hope may bring deep disappointment.

Heineken adds that his article, which is entitled "World Economics and Central Europe," does not mean that one signifies the other, but that one is the complement of the other. A Central European economic league can only have permanent advantages, he asserts, if each member of the league has world connections, and world economics must likewise bring communication with such an important factor as this league would be.

Difficult to Replace Losses.

The completion of this league, wonderful as its realization would be, will not suffice, he proceeds, although the Central European idea, with its multitudinous connections, especially when Turkey and part of the Balkans are included, and the road to India via the Persian Gulf, is enormous. He argues that the idea that Central European economic districts will replace everything which Germany has lost in the war is an exaggeration.

Reference is made to the last meeting of the German-Austro-Hungarian Economic League June 1, when it was resolved that the league would either guarantee further economic relations with the world or would be strong enough to resist if the enemy refused to resume economic relations. Heineken continues that it is perfectly clear that this can only be a temporary defensive league and cannot replace the former exchange of goods with the world.

Quoting Professor Manes, he says:

"We understand today that the closest league of the Central Powers and the closest connections cannot possibly suffice to supply Germany and Austria with the raw materials, as well as foodstuffs and fodder, that these countries require unless they are willing to fall behind the standing of pre-war days and content themselves with the rôle of a third rate power."

A glance at pre-war import statistics, the writer observes, will suffice to show that it is an impossibility to pretend that raw materials and other necessities needed by Germany can be supplied permanently by the European Continent. The aim of the league, Heineken argues, should not be to shut out communication with the world or to encourage the idea that it is a substitute for lost markets, as a few years would suffice to destroy Germany's power as a world importer and exporter.

Demand for Naval Bases.

The Kölniache Volks-zeitung brings up the question of naval bases and their importance in connection with von Hertling's speech and the upbuilding of Germany's colonial empire. This question, of which the masses of the German people understand but little, has been left in abeyance of late, but the paper says that it deserves more attention than it receives.

History has shown that naval bases are motors of colonial policy, it continues, and Great Britain is a classical example. The paper then points to the Australian desire to be "supreme" in the Pacific, and, indeed, the South Sea Islands, and says that with all these world political questions that of naval bases becomes ever more important. Germany must have good ports and island connections, it asserts, and successes on the Continent do not suffice.

Germany needs bases on the West African Coast, the article maintains, and must have a complete agreement with Portugal for the ports of Tiger Bay and the Islands Prinzipe Sao Thome, and must also have bases on the East African Coast. Zanzibar, it says, must be returned. The paper enumerates various other places which would certainly be of great advantage to Germany's ambitious overseas plans.

WOMEN PREPARE FOR LOAN.

Say Burden of Next Liberty Drive Will Rest on Them.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Assertion that the continuation of the war and the shifting of young men who worked in previous Liberty Loan campaigns into military or industrial service is placing the burden of raising future loans upon the women was made by every Chairman at the session today of the National Woman's Liberty Loan Committee.

Mrs. John Pratt, Federal Reserve Chairman of the New York District, announced that Benjamin Strong, Governor of that district, already had taken the women workers of New York into equal partnership. Mrs. F. L. Higginson of Boston said that in New England the fourth loan must be largely campaigned by women.

Many of the women told of opposition they had encountered in their work for the last loan, attributing much of their difficulties to the German idea "that woman's place is in the home." Much prejudice was also encountered, it was said, from country bankers.

SHIP SUNK BY MINE OFF NEW ZEALAND

Twenty-six Out of 100 Persons on Board Perish When the Wimmera Goes Down.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 17.—Passengers on a trans-Pacific liner arriving today, brought news of the recent sinking by a mine off the New Zealand coast of the steamship Wimmera, a vessel of 3,000 tons, with the loss of twenty-six lives. The mine was hit in the shipping route between Sydney and Auckland.

The ship carried a large crew and about 100 passengers. Captain Rolls, the commander, went down with the ship.

Survivors had a thrilling experience, one boat being afloat thirty-six hours before reaching shore.

The loss of the Wimmera was the first disaster due to a mine in the antipodes.

SEQUEL TO BOLO EXECUTION

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 17.—M. Duval, General Manager of the defeatist newspaper Bonnet Rouge, was shot this morning as a traitor by a military firing squad at Vincennes, just outside of Paris, on the same spot where Bolo Pacha met a similar fate a few weeks ago.

The condemned man met death with remarkable courage and with the calm fatalism he had shown ever since the sentence of the court-martial was pronounced. Knowing his fate to be sealed, Duval, after the rejection of his appeal by the Supreme Court, refused for two or three days to make a final appeal for mercy to the President of the Republic, but was ultimately persuaded to do so, and signed a formal document with a shrug of the shoulders, which showed that he had no illusions as to the result.

This last appeal was rejected, and when representatives of the law entered his cell at the Sante Prison at 4 o'clock this morning to announce that his execution was imminent, Duval received them with a quiet smile. Before the Government Commissary had time to pronounce the customary phrases Duval coolly interrupted him:

"You are going to tell me to have courage, M. Le Commissaire," he said to the Lieutenant. "I shall have plenty, I promise you."

The man who was to be shot within an hour drew a cigar from his pocket and tranquilly began to smoke. For a few moments he stood silently reflecting, still the same apparently modest, peaceable little man who had lived very humbly with his wife in a small $200 a year apartment, who went nowhere despite the fact that his illicit gains were known to have been somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000.

The mystery of what became of the profits of Duval's treason is as great as that of the little man himself. It is possible, as has been the case in other instances, that the bulk of "profits" were seized by men higher up, and that Duval was merely a helpless victim.

The execution of M. Duval is the second growing out of the German propaganda of "Boloism" or "defeatism" in France. The first to face the firing squad was Bolo Pacha. Soon after his execution the trial of Duval and six other defendants was begun.

SENSATION AT MALVY TRIAL.

Editor Whose Paper Is Mentioned Protests and Is Ejected.

PARIS, July 17.—The proceedings of the second day of the trial of Louis Malvy, the former Minister of the Interior, charged with high treason, were overshadowed by the feeling of elation at the failure of the German offensive, Parisians ignoring the Senate Chamber, which looked deserted as compared with the squares in which the newspapers were being sold.

The reading of the remainder of the indictment against M. Malvy occupied more than three hours. The second part of the indictment related more especially to Malvy's intimacy with persons of unsavory reputation, including Miguel Almereyda and others connected with the Bonnet Rouge.

A hush fell over the courtroom when the name of Duval, who was executed this morning, was mentioned. M. Malvy appeared to shrink and shudder as his name was coupled with that of Duval, but he soon recovered and followed the proceedings in what seemed to be a bored manner.

Referring to M. Malvy's association with certain newspapermen, M. Peret, former Minister of Justice, who read the indictment, created a sensation when he mentioned the newspaper Eveil. The editor of this publication, Jacques Dhur, who occupied a seat in the gallery, protested vigorously and asked that he be heard. The Senators refused to interrupt the proceedings, but as M. Dhur insisted upon making an explanation immediately, guards were called and he was ejected from the building.

Witnesses in the case will be heard tomorrow when Léon Daudet, editor of L'Action Française, who has charged that M. Malvy betrayed secrets to Germany, is expected to take the stand.

CAILLAUX ASKS FOR TRIAL.

Former Premier Charges "Police Machinations to Reach Me."

PARIS, July 17.—Joseph Caillaux, former Premier, who is in prison, has written to Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, renewing his request that the Government hasten his trial on charges of communicating with the enemy.

The former Premier complains of "certain falsifications in telegrams," probably alluding to those sent by Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States, to a German agent in Argentina. M. Caillaux adds:

"I shall have occasion soon to enlighten my colleagues in regard to the police machinations to which men have sunk and are sinking in an effort to reach me."

Schnorer Club Gives Ambulance.

The Schnorer Club, the pioneer social organization of the Bronx, has donated an ambulance to the United States Government for General Hospital 1, in Gun Hill Road, the Bronx. Formal presentation ceremonies will take place at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon at the hospital. The ambulance is of a standard type and cost $2,250. The club numbers among its members several who are with the colors, Major Wilbor T. Wright of the 105th Field Artillery, Captain Thomas Hayes Curtin, M. D.; Lieutenant G. Francis Pattan, M. D., of the 165th Infantry, and others.

GERMANS START LIES ABOUT OUR SHIPYARDS

Government Disproves a Propaganda Tale About Fatal Accidents in the Plants.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—German propaganda has been turned against the shipbuilding industry in a vain effort to stem the growing output of ships which are to carry men and munitions to Europe.

Maliciously circulated statements to the effect that more men are being killed and injured in the construction of ships than in the trenches in France were denied officially tonight by the Shipping Board. In the Hog Island yard, which was said to be a fair example of what has been accomplished by the board's accident prevention work, the accident rate in May was only six in a thousand men, as compared with the pre-war average of 2; 8-10 reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Two departments have been created for special work in safeguarding the lives and health of shipyard workers, and men are encouraged to report even the slightest scratch for treatment, so there may be no danger of infection.

"The rate of accidents is constantly decreasing," said an official statement, "and it is confidently predicted that within the next few months the shipyards will be showing a lower rate than the most favored private industrial institutions."

TRIALS OF AN AUSTRIAN STATESMAN.

When Baron BURIAN talks about "this senseless war," when he praises the genius of President WILSON and declares that the four points in his Fourth of July address will not, "apart from certain exaggerations, arouse our opposition," he speaks for Austria. In those passages of his address in which he exhibits an altogether shameless insolence, truculence, and mendacity, he is speaking under the hard constraint of the bonds that enslave Austria-Hungary to Germany. It is a trying position for the Baron, for he must make his words contradict themselves. He must make the people of the Dual Monarchy believe that their rulers desire peace, but he must beware of arousing the anger of Potsdam by showing too great a solicitude for the ending of the war. The Foreign Minister declares that "territorial aims are, in "fact, the only things now separating "the different belligerent groups." He would have it appear that these territorial aims are imperialistic, prompted by the desire to seize territory as a spoil of war. No one knows better than he that the Allies desire territorial changes only that enslaved peoples may be set free, that they may become masters of their own destinies, and achieve their own national aspirations. Aside from the first great obstacle to peace, German militarism still unconquered, there are three others, three issues of the war which Baron BURIAN regards as already settled, but about which the Allies hold a different opinion. They are the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, which put 175,000,000 Russians in thralldom to the Central Powers; the treaty of Bucharest, which reduced Rumania to the condition of a vassal State, and the aspirations of the nationalities under bondage to Austria to achieve their freedom.

The Foreign Minister of the Dual Monarchy has the impudence to speak of that blot upon the face of civilization as "a product of historical and "ethnographical necessity, which "carry in themselves the funda-"mental principle of life and race." We have no idea what that means, but we know very well what President WILSON meant when he said:

> The peoples of Austria-Hungary, whose place among the nations we wish to see safeguarded and assured, should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous self-government.

Austria will accept no foreign advice in this matter, says the Baron. "The States and races of the mon-"archy will settle their internal prob-"lems in agreement with their ruler." It is one of the war aims of the Allies to deliver these nationalities from their present "ruler," who has always treated them as subject peoples. This is a vital war aim, because until it has been carried out, the peace of Europe and the peace of the world will rest upon no secure basis. The hope of deliverance grows in the hearts of these peoples with every day of the war's progress, and they can be denied only at the cost of endless uprisings and strifes in the future.

Baron BURIAN coolly informs the Allies that they have no right to complain of the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest. They were invited to take part in the negotiations, and might have secured fair terms had they accepted the invitation. It is unnecessary to say that the Allies have never had any thought of making peace on German terms, they have no thought of accepting Germany's triumphs and treaties in the East as a finality. What the enslavement of the Rumanians means to the world was pointed out very clearly by Mr. VON KUEHLMANN in his address to the Berlin Chamber of Commerce on May 23. He rejoiced that at last Germany had come into full control of the Danube, "that great water-"way connecting the east and west "which has only come to be appre-"ciated at its full value during the "war." He made no concealment of the harshness of the terms Rumania was compelled to accept. That unfortunate monarchy was not to be left in control of its only outlet to the Black Sea apart from the Danube. "It has therefore been agreed," said Mr. VON KUEHLMANN, "that the line "Czernavoda-Constanza should be "leased to a German industrial com-"pany for a number of years; in "Constanza itself a free port is to be "established of such a character that "customs—free and otherwise com-"pletely unhampered import and ex-"port—appear secure for us as long "as can be foreseen." What the Rumanians think of this appears from the protest and appeal addressed to the allied Governments in the name of the Rumanian people and signed by the Committee of the Rumanian Colony in Paris, the Committee of Rumanians in Transylvania and Bukowina, and the Rumanian Delegates to the Congress of Oppressed Nationalities. In that document the treaty is thus interpreted:

> Her enemies have imposed upon her what they call a peace of German friendship. It is in reality a most cruel and insulting enslavement; military enslavement through the loss of the Carpathian chain; political enslavement by the introduction of German officers in all the great departments of State; commercial enslavement through the rape of the Dobrudja, the only maritime province in Rumania, and by enemy control of the navigation of the Danube; industrial enslavement by the seizure of the oil wells which constitute the principal mineral wealth of the country; financial enslavement by control of our whole export trade and especially of our principal product, grain.

The treaty of Brest-Litovsk and continued acts of German hostility against the Russian people, with whom Germany professes to have concluded a peace, make it altogether impossible for the Allies to come to any terms with Germany until Russia is delivered out of her hands. Acceptance of that treaty, with its consequences, would be an admission of defeat, the great object of the war would be unaccomplished, Germany would be left entirely free to assemble her forces for a fresh onslaught upon the Western Powers. These are the territorial aims of the Allies which Baron BURIAN flagrantly misrepresents. It is one of their aims to restore Russia to the Russians; it is another to rescue the Rumanians from strangulation by Germany and give them freedom in their own country; it is another to remove the cause of future wars by securing for the oppressed nationalities of the Dual Monarchy the blessings of liberty. "Where "can you put your finger on the map "and say there Austria did good?" These are the memorable words of Mr. GLADSTONE in that great Midlothian speech. The Allies would be a feeble folk indeed if after the colossal costs and sacrifices of the great war they should be unable to put their finger somewhere on the map and say there they had accomplished good work. In Russia, in Rumania, and in Austria itself it is their resolve that the work in which they are engaged shall proceed to full achievement.

THE SARATOGA CONVENTION.

The genius of the directed primary has been good to Governor WHITMAN. His is two-thirds or thereabouts of the unofficial State Convention which meets at Saratoga today. Mischievous dissenters and Lewisites will seek to bedevil the designs of the excellent director of the primary and the show; but doubtless they will come to vexation, as should be the fate of the wicked.

In the personal frictions, ambitions, and animosities of leaders of the Republican Party of New York or its factions, people in general are not deeply interested. The pre-eminent, the sole subject of common thought is the energetic and successful prosecution of the war. Speeches and declarations of loyalty and patriotism will be the part of the convention's proceedings that will stir the ordinary citizen.

These speeches and declarations will be judged by the names on the Republican State ticket, which, unfortunately, under our system of directed primaries, is no business of this convention, only a simulacrum of that old, discarded, indispensable organ of party responsibility, the extinct State Convention. It is impossible to believe, however, that there will be on that ticket a single nomination to which even the shadow of a suspicion of disloyalty or disloyal associations can attach.

TAXATION AND PROHIBITION.

Mr. KITCHIN, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, is calmly walking over the fanatical Drys who were so hot to throw away revenue for the sake of forcing their unappeasable idol of prohibition upon the country during the war. He waves aside, as any man or economist of sense ought, the amendment to the Food Stimulation bill that makes the United States dry next January. Senator SIMMONS, Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has vainly told the zealots that the Treasury will lose an immense revenue if the Drys have their way.

Mr. KITCHIN, accepting some of the suggestions made by the Treasury Department last week in regard to the taxation of luxuries, proposes, in his first draft of the Revenue bill, to double the existing taxes on alcoholic beverages. In place of the present $450,000,000 a year, these taxes would bring in $900,000,000 a year, nearly one-eighth of the $8,000,000,000 to be raised by the bill.

There will be wailing and gnashing of teeth among the statesmen to whom beer is the sum of all evils and prohibition the one thing needful and the linchpin of the world. Yet it would be hard to make a more preposterous proposal than wantonly to toss away nearly a billion of revenue, easily collected, for the sake of hammering a fixed idea into the statute books.

INTER-ALLY EXCHANGES.

There is no doubt that the dislocation of the exchanges due to the war is an impediment to victory. The occasion of the remark is the appeal of gallant Italy that she shall not be compelled to pay twice for the goods necessary to oppose the Huns, as is practically the case when her currency and ours show their present want of balance. Every day that any of the Entente Allies pays more than it need for the supplies of the war it loses a bloodless battle and puts on itself, to that extent, the disability which the blockade imposes upon Germany. Not for the sake of Italy alone, but for the sake of all the Entente members, there is need of a financial unity among them comparable to the military unity which was adopted after four years of hard experience. The financial task should be the easier, but it is the later to be attacked, as it has been in the hearings of the Senate Committee upon Banking. The nature of the case indicates that the problem should be solved as an incident of the war, and not as an ordinary undertaking of bankers or merchants to equalize the exchanges.

It is absurd to propose the latter method, when the seas are blockaded, when there are land embargoes, when several countries have so much gold that they put obstacles in the way of receiving more, and when other countries are so extended that they prevent gold leaving their jurisdiction. The exchanges cannot be corrected under such conditions. Neither should the exchange rates of any country be treated individually. That has been attempted in the case of sterling most successfully, and we see the result. Sterling is accumulated where it is cheap and sold where it is dear. The result is that New York is the dumping ground of all the sterling owned by all neutral nations. They cash here their credits against England and thereby enrich themselves as we did before we went into the war. That is not a service to commerce such as bankers or merchants fairly profit by ordinarily. It gives aid to Germany in proportion that it casts burdens upon us to lend England to supply the dollars with which sterling is pegged. Not to wander too far from the text, and to point the moral in the case of Italy, it should be remarked that we have advanced to Italy $650,000,000, or double the excess of our exports to Italy over our imports from Italy during the war. It is clear that the giving of dollar credits to Italy has been ample enough to maintain the exchanges in normal relations, if it could be done in that way. Others, perhaps, may be able to explain what became of the surplus of the credits over the excess of our exports, but there is so much underground finance in these abnormal times that an unprofessional opinion would not be justified.

The suggestion is not that our credits to Italy should be limited. On the contrary, whatever goods any ally wants for war should be supplied by any Entente Government to any other, on an open account, on a gold basis, and no questions of exchange should be allowed to arise in the present. They belong to the future, after the war shall have been won. If no exchange is created, there can be no traffic in it. Not only would that block the games of those who buy and sell sterling instead of paying their own bills in their own currency or in dollars; it would put pressure upon neutrals like that used by Germany in Germany's interests. At the Senate hearing it was said by bankers in charge of this subject for their institutions that the dollar was depreciated in Spain, Holland, Switzerland, and other neutral countries "because the banks in those countries "feared to advance money to Amer-"ican bankers lest they incur Ger-"many's displeasure." Spanish banks will lend to us for the purchase of supplies for PERSHING's forces "only "if gold were shipped to them, and "upon no other collateral." That is mockery, and an invitation to a financial offensive. If they will do business with their friends only in that unfriendly manner, they should be put to a choice whether they prefer to deal with the Teutonic allies or with the Entente, on open account, to be adjusted at a more convenient time.

The proposal is novel, but not so strange as this war. It is far from being original, for it has been made simultaneously in principle by several merchants in several countries. In this country it was made first in principle by Mr. LEOPOLD FREDERIC, if he was correctly understood. In Paris ALFRED NEYMARCK said a few weeks ago: "My friend LUZZATI (who "put Italian finances right years ago) "has never ceased demanding one "thing since the war began—a finan-"cial and economic entente among "the Allies. * * * If such financial "union had existed from the begin-"ning of the war, we should have "stopped short the wild race of "American, English, and particularly "neutral exchange." Deputy DI CESARO was quoted in a Rome cable to THE TIMES on July 4 as indorsing the idea of an international reserve board for the clearing of international exchanges on the principle that the Federal Reserve Board clears our domestic exchanges without moving a dollar of gold. The idea is a large one, but small compared with the commitments already existing between the Allies. It would end the intolerable spectacle of our allies buying in depreciated currency while thrifty neutrals, like Spain, make 50 per cent. profit through the procured depreciation of our dollars in Madrid. What should be stabilized is less the exchanges, Italy's or any other's, than the gold standard itself, which is threatened doubly. First, there is the familiar result due to the surplus of paper used. Secondly, there is the dislocation between values in goods and in gold when gold and goods are not freely exchangeable. Thus we arrive at the position that in helping Italy from its embarrassment we are safeguarding the future of the gold standard, which means more to us than to any other nation, for we shall lose more than any other nation if there shall be a revival of fiscal fallacies due to the strain of recuperation after the war.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT.

In the proud sorrow that has come to Mr. ROOSEVELT's home, millions of American homes where the blow has fallen or is yet to fall have a keen sympathetic share. Young, gallant, with all bright, unspoiled hopes and gifts before him, QUENTIN ROOSEVELT has found, worthily and manfully, the best of deaths. To him, to all who have died or are to die for freedom, the honor and the love of all free peoples will be given forever. His father, who has offered all his sons to his country, stands higher for that patriotic sacrifice than even the achievements of his great career could place him. The American people mourn with him. They salute reverently the grief and glory of this brave death.

Of QUENTIN ROOSEVELT, of all who have been or are to be his co-mates in heroic life and death, we shall think, when a few years have softened sorrow, as the Greeks did of that band of Spartans that fell before the barbarians of their time:

Of all who at Thermopylae were slain,
Glorious the doom and beautiful the lot;
Their tomb an altar. Men from tears refrain,

THE HOSPITAL OUTRAGE AT JOUY.

The Germans cannot fail to know that their own wounded receive the best medical attention and careful nursing at the American Red Cross hospitals in France. This is not the case because soldiers of the Western Allies are tenderly treated in German hospitals—the evidence is to the contrary when a private soldier is concerned (officers are not neglected.) The Germans know by reports of their efficient intelligence department that the hospitals of the Western Allies are conducted humanely; they know it, too, from exchanged prisoners. Yet the bombing of Red Cross hospitals by German aviators is of frequent occurrence. They must follow instructions, and there must be method in the instructions.

On Monday night an American Red Cross hospital at Jouy, France, was attacked by German aviators. The casualties were two enlisted men killed and nine attendants wounded. At the request of HARVEY D. GIBSON, the American Red Cross Commissioner in France, a report on the outrage has been made for the official record. The hospital, it is stated, was three kilometers from the nearest railway—a captured German officer brought down after bombing a British hospital plainly marked asked insolently, "Why did you place your hospital near a railway?" To render the American hospital at Jouy immune from attack from the air a cross 100 feet long was outlined on the lawn, and it was visible from an airplane flying several thousand feet above, according to the report made to Mr. GIBSON. There is photographic proof of the fact.

On the night of the outrage a moon brought out the "protecting" cross distinctly. Yet two German aviators flew to and fro several times, and, shutting off their engines, dropped to a few hundred feet above the hospital to discharge their bombs and score hits. Fragments of one of the explosives crashed through a window, just missing the surgeon in charge, who was performing an operation. A fragment lacerated the chest of an orderly in the act of raising a patient to give him water. One attendant lost a leg; a woman nurse was struck down. As patients lay in a row on cots a piece of a bomb hurtled through the ward close to their heads. In this same hospital sixty German prisoners were recently discharged after treatment. On the Fourth of July they shared the delicacies of the Americans, French, and British. No discrimination in any particular.

There have been so many attacks on Red Cross hospitals by German aviators, attacks deliberate and with no extenuating circumstance, that one wonders why the Medical Corps or the Red Cross Commissioners expect anything else from an enemy who puts "frightfulness" in the forefront of his tactics. If the Germans will not refrain from sinking Red Cross ships brilliantly "protected" by electric letters and encircling bulbs by night, they are not going to miss any opportunity to bomb field and base hospitals which minister to the wounded—even their own. Hospitals mend mutilated men, and they take their place in the line again; therefore the hospitals must be destroyed. They contain combatants temporarily out of the fighting. The logic satisfies the German mind, which declines to recognize Hague Convention humanities. A record should be made of every hospital outrage, and punitive damages should be exacted when the Western Allies have won a military victory.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Rule with Many Exceptions.

Among the American soldiers whose names appeared in the lists of casualties, this week, is a certain CHARLES STEINKAMP, not hitherto known or heard of outside of a circle of relatives and acquaintances presumably not large. He was set down as "missing," a word vague but sinister, as it may mean that he is either dead or alive as a German prisoner, fates between which there is a choice not altogether simple or easy. One thing only is sure—STEINKAMP, at the age of 22, was where the young American of his years goes to offer his all in the service of his country, at the front and earning his share of the praise and glory that are coming so abundantly, now, to his class and kind.

Note further, that this young soldier of ours was born in Germany—that he was brought to the United States by his parents when he was 5 years old, and that once before in his short life he had answered the call to the colors, for he had served under General PERSHING in Mexico and been wounded there.

The spirit with which STEINKAMP went to war again is shown in the last letter received from him—one dated June 11. In it he inclosed $50 with which his father was to buy a Liberty bond "to help in the downfall of the Kaiser," and this was to be in addition to bonds to the amount of $200 already purchased. "I have two stripes on my sleeve," he proudly wrote, "to show trench service, am in the best of health, and am doing my bit to help in the downfall of Germany." Enlightening reading, this will be, for those who insist that to the rule, "Once a German, always a German," there are no exceptions. A significant touch is given to the picture of this boy by the fact that he was in the Marine Corps, a body of volunteers. He went to war because he wanted to go to war—and to this war.

Another exception to the so-called rule as to Germans was revealed in Dr. ABRAHAM JACOBI's letter, printed yesterday, accepting the Honorary Presidency of the Friends of German Democracy, an organization of Americans, most of them of German origin, who favor the ending of Hohenzollern rule in the country once theirs. Dr. JACOBI, now in his 89th year, was a revolutionist in '48, and he is still seeking what he then sought in vain.

A Romancer Poses as Statesman.

Several readers of THE TIMES seem to have been greatly excited over an article by ARNOLD BENNETT, printed in last Sunday's issue. The comments they make on the article are just enough in substance, but they take Mr. BENNETT altogether too seriously, for, like not a few other literary lights, some of them more brilliant than he and some less brilliant, he is considerably more interesting than important when he ventures out of his own domain and enters that of international politics. Of course his complaint that the Allies have not given to the peace offers of Germany the sort and amount of attention those offers deserve was an absurdity, and worse than an absurdity, and of course he shattered his own argument when he naively admitted that not one of the offers in question had been of a kind to merit any more respectful consideration than they did receive.

But what of that? Widely as opinions differ as to the exact elevation among British writers to be accorded by the critics of the future to Mr. BENNETT, he already occupies a place sufficiently high to make anything he says worth hearing, merely because he says it. There is not much probability, and no certainty, that his discussions of war and peace will ever be intrinsically valuable in the way of ending the one or hasting the dawn of the other, but—well, Mr. BENNETT's article evidently was read with care by a large number of people. As evidently they did not find it dull. In other words, they were interested, as most of them must have been many times before, by the man's powers of expression, his emotional sincerity, his obvious belief in himself and his "call."

Mr. BENNETT has written at least one novel that had something more of greatness to it than its length, and none of the others is negligible, for it cannot be denied that the least of them is amusing enough pleasantly to beguile the passing hour—whatever that may be. So, when Mr. BENNETT writes an article about peace and war it gets printed. "His name carries it," as the phrase is. Nobody need agree with him and it is quite unnecessary to be angry with him.

Tyranny Well Explained.

In a nearby suburb there is a street of little houses, backing on a railway over which trains loaded with soldiers frequently pass. Naturally, the dwellers in the little houses are deeply interested in these trains, and the interest, having been noticed by these most estimable of travelers, has resulted in the development of a curious custom.

The men on the way to "over there" daily throw from the car windows a considerable number of letters in order that they may be picked up and mailed. Probably this desire should not be granted, for the too obvious purpose of the transaction is to evade the military censorship as to information about troop movements. The boys of the neighborhood do not think of that, however, and struggle eagerly with each other for the purpose of serving their heroes.

The other day, in a group of elders watching this highly irregular system of mail collection was one woman who has not yet forgotten the Germany from which she came long ago, and another, a daughter of Ireland, whose Americanization has been complete. The German woman seized what she thought to be an opportunity for a bit of "propaganda." Raising her hands in indignation, she exclaimed, "What a country! They call it 'free,' and they won't let a soldier mail a letter to his folks!"

Most of her hearers seemed inclined to sympathize with the grievance thus expressed, but the daughter of Ireland has a quick mind. "And why won't they let 'em?" she asked. "They can't because the country is full of German spies who would warn the U-boats!"

Enthusiastic applause from the bystanders, and American morale was saved again.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Many interesting articles have appeared in your valued columns regarding the appropriateness of the term American. In Latin America we only object to your exclusive use of this designation in so far as it embraces the whole of our hemisphere. Owing to the astounding ignorance of foreigners of our territorial divisions, when people inquire our nationalities we usually reply South or Central Americans, avoiding thereby extended geographical dissertations. When we talk about the citizens of the United States we usually call them North Americans, and Europeans generally make equal distinctions. It has been suggested by many of our statesmen that the name of our hemisphere be changed to Columbia, deservedly to honor its daring discoverer, America being only a derivation from the name of its first cartographer. In such case the term American could be used exclusively by you without hurting our feelings or creating linguistic confusion, the title Columbian to be applied to all the natives of our continent. The only drawback to this convenient and important change lies in the fact that the appellation Columbian designates today the natives of Colombia, a title this republic could well sacrifice to better consolidate the fame of our immortal Columbus, by assuming anew her beautiful former name of New Granada, as a reminder of the past glories of her heroic Granadinos. An Orator's Confession.

On one or two occasions, in quoting a stanza from the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," I accredited the authorship of this glorious poem to Harriet Beecher Stowe. This was surely a stupid blunder, and just how I should have confused Julia Ward Howe with the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is a riddle which I cannot solve. Suffice it, the deed has been done, and thus thousands of people, unless previously otherwise informed, have been regaled with what the late Harry MacDonna used to designate as "a false fact."

I have been engaged in educational work for many years. In addressing student bodies I have always contended that no one has the right to make public speeches unless thoroughly familiar with all of the facts pertaining to the matters to be discussed; moreover, he should be equipped oratorically to make a presentation of his views in such a manner as to impress his audiences with his thorough familiarity with his subject, his enthusiasm in and for it, and should also have the ability to "put it across." To have sinned in the cardinal feature of this outline of the needs of a public speaker, even though it may have been in but one particular, was an egregious error, for which I apologize to those who may have been misinformed by my blunder, or who, knowing the facts, must have been shocked at my seeming ignorance.

A FOUR MINUTE MAN.

The Marines' Casualty List.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The truth of the reply of one of the two marine prisoners so far taken to the German Intelligence Officer, "We kill or get killed," is attested by the marine casualty report. The summary given out July 14 shows killed 565, died of disease, 54; wounded, 1,045; prisoners, 2; missing, 61; total, 1,681. For each man killed, 1.85 were wounded. In the army reports the ratio is 3.27 wounded for each man killed. Secretary Baker reported 14,644 marines in France on July 1. The total casualties to July 14 were 1,681 or almost 11 per cent. The number of all other arms sent abroad to July was 1,004,471 and the total casualties to July 14 were 10,050, a trifle less than 1 per cent. I do not remember ever seeing so small a percentage of wounded to killed as the marines' casualty list shows. Usually the wounded are between 3 and 4 for every man killed.

Could Burian Have Smiled?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The address of Foreign Minister Burian to the Austrian and Hungarian Premiers, as printed in your issue of today contains a gem of audacious statement in the paragraph reading:

> If our enemies continuously demand atonement for wrong done and restitution, then this is a claim which we could urge with more justification against them, because we have been attacked, and the wrong done to us must be redressed.

Imagine the Pecksniffian Minister trying to pass out such a dish as this for the Entente to swallow! The saintly Burian must have smiled in the presence of the angelic Premier when he uttered these words. When the day of settlement does come both Burian and the others of the Central Powers will learn what atonement means. J. H. B.

THE MARCH OF FATE.

It was not a "Let's hurrah!" parade
That slowly came to view,
Though the masses cheered and the music played
Along the Avenue.

It was Fate who marshaled from various posts
His dauntless marching men;
From ice-bound wastes he called his hosts,
From tropic marsh and fen;
And they came as swift as avenging ghosts.
They came and will come again.

Went marching up the street;
The leader's purpose marked each face,
His will was in the beat
Of the steady, dominant, thumping pace
Of myriad marching feet.

This was the urge that made them go
Forward, line on line:
The mills of the gods grind slow, grind slow,
But the mills of the gods grind fine;
And the curse of the gods spreads wrack and woe
When the wills of the gods combine.

Was fashioned a rod of steel;
It was tempered by fires that weary not;
It was molded for woe or weal
By the hand of Fate to use red hot

That slowly came to view,
Along the Avenue.

ELIAS LIEBERMAN.

Women Democrats Fail to Elect Her Honorary Chairman.

Brooklyn Democrats were stirred yesterday by the action on Monday night of the Twentieth Assembly District Women's Regular Democratic Club in refusing to elect Mrs. John F. Hylan, wife of the Mayor, honorary chairman. About 150 women were present and Mrs. Mildred Shanley acted as temporary chairman in the absence of Mrs. Anna Spencer, President of the club, wo was ill. Mrs. Caroline Bauer made the motion that Mrs. Hylan be elected honorary chairman, but half a dozen women members immediately opposed the motion and there was considerable confusion.

"Mrs. Hylan may be all right," one woman declared, "but she is no better than anybody else just because her husband is Mayor. I am oposed to making her honorary chairman."

Other women sided with her, and as no one seconded the motion it was not carried.

The matter of a constitution was discussed and a motion carried to frame and present a constitution for approval on Aug. 20.

DISCUSS NEW REVENUE BILL

WASHINGTON, July 17.—For three hours today the House Ways and Means Committee considered a tentative draft of the new $8,000,000,000 revenue bill, as framed by Chairman Kitchin and others. There was a general discussion of the tax on incomes, excess profits, and luxuries, but no conclusion upon any particular item was reached, and the committee adjourned until Friday, while the tentative draft is being further worked out.

The draft considered today is a composite of the present tax laws with a number of changes, particularly in rates, proposed.

The only new suggestion in the confidential print of the tentative bill is as to taxes on candy and firearms, but no rate of taxation is proposed. None of the long list of luxuries which the Treasury proposed for taxation are included in the draft. They will be taken up later. Many of them, members of the committee believe, are likely to be discarded.

BRITISH IMPORTS INCREASE.

June Total Is £15,538,000 More Than That of June, 1917.

LONDON, July 17. — The British Board of Trade figures for June, issued today, show increases in imports of £15,538,000, compared with the total for June, 1917. The increases included food, £4,000,000; cotton, £3,000,000; oils and seeds, £4,000,000, and manufactured articles, £7,000,000.

Export increases were £1,374,000, but the increase of £5,000,000 in the export of cotton manufactured goods was offset by the decrease of other manufactured articles.

BRITAIN HONORS HERRICK.

Sends Old Plate in Appreciation of His Early War Work in Paris.

It was revealed for the first time yesterday that ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio, Chairman of the National Finance Committee of the War Camp Community Service, had received from the British Government a piece of old English plate, with an appreciation from Sir Edward Grey of "the great assistance rendered by you when, as Ambassador to the French Republic, you remained in Paris after the departure of the French Government and the British Embassy and extended your protection to the many British who turned to you for aid and advice."

Although the message was transmitted by the former British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice in May, 1915, Governor Herrick never consented until now to have this honor made public. The message of transmission said in part:

"His Majesty's Government desire to ask your acceptance of this piece of old English plate which they hope will serve to you and yours as a memorial of the exertions which you so devotedly and generously employed on behalf of British subjects, both soldiers and civilians, in that time of stress and suffering, and as a token of the King's grateful recognition of the same."

HAD PLAN TO WIN WAR.

Bronx Realty Man Advertised for $5,000 Gifts to the Government.

The United States Government will now have to win the war without the assistance of Max C. Baum, a realty dealer of 553 East 187th Street, Bronx, who had attracted the attention of Federal officers by an advertisement announcing his "secret plan for winning the war for the Entente Allies"—a secret which he refused to reveal until District Attorney Swann gave him an opportunity yesterday to discuss it before the Grand Jury. Even the jurymen had to agree to secrecy before the Bronx man consented to say that he had intended to build fifty thousand airplanes as a gift to the Government, to be paid for out of contributions by wealthy patriots amounting to a total of "some $250,000,000 or $500,000,000."

At the request of a representative of the Department of Justice the District Attorney got Baum to his office on a subpoena. Baum told Assistant District Attorney Kilroe that he had organized the "American League for World Peace by Allied Victory," which was to be accomplished by his "secret plan." He had written to Colonel Roosevelt and Nathan Straus and some 400 other well known men to get their co-operation. Then he had advertised for contributions of $5,000 each, but had got no response, he declared. Baum was advised that his project was "too visionary" and should be dropped, which he promised to do.

WAR BONDS A LOYALTY TEST

$30,000 Worth Quickly Wins Citizenship for John McKeown.

Ownership of $30,000 worth of Liberty bonds made the path to citizenship easy for John McKeown of 64 Carnegie Avenue, East Orange, when he made application before Judge Lawrence in Newark yesterday. After learning of McKeown's ownership of the bonds the Judge granted his application without questioning him as to his loyalty.

When Patrick Garrigan of 77 Newark Street applied and said that he had failed to seek naturalization papers during his fifty-one years' residence in this country he was treated differently. Garrigan, who came to this country in 1867, said he could not obtain employment because he was not a citizen. His request was refused.

OSBORN WILL STICK IN FIGHT, HE SAYS

WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR

William Church Osborn made it plain yesterday that he intended to remain in the governorship race right up to the primaries on Sept. 3, no matter whether William R. Hearst is a candidate or not, and regardless of what action is taken at the Democratic unofficial convention at Saratoga next Tuesday. Mr. Osborn said he had thrown his hat into the ring primarily for the purpose of defeating Hearst, but saw no good reason for withdrawing until the people had expressed their opinion on Primary Day.

Despite the cocksureness of the Tammany leaders that Hearst has been eliminated, Mr. Osborn believes that the "Hearst menace," as he termed it, is by no means over, and he has no intention of trusting either the editor or Charles F. Murphy. Should Hearst be the official choice of the party at the primaries Mr. Osborn may even continue his fight against him right up to the election as an independent candidate.

"You would be astonished," said Mr. Osborn yesterday, "at the number of letters and telegrams I am receiving every day, not only in the State, but from all over the country, congraulating me upon my announced intention to keep Hearst from getting the nomination and offering to support me. Regardless of the reports from Tammany Hall that Hearst has been eliminated, the danger of his becoming a candidate is as acute as ever, and I am going to fight him to a finish. No matter if Hearst announces his withdrawal from the race, I intend to remain a candidate right up to the primaries.

Would Like to be Governor.

"Why should I not be a candidate? I was the first in the race and I led all the others in the balloting when the Committee of Forty-two met at Syracuse. I believe I can defeat the Republican nominee, whoever he is. They have absolutely nothing against me and my platform will be a strong American one. First of all I want to rid the party of the menace of Hearst, but, frankly, I would like to be Governor. It is a high office and there is nothing wrong in aspiring to it. I expect to open headquarters shortly in New York City, but I will also have headquarters up-State, probably in Utica."

"What about the criticism that it is hard to determine whether you are an up-State man or a New York City man?" Mr. Osborn was asked.

"That criticism is easy to meet," he replied. "Isn't it in favor of a candidate that he knows the city as well as he knows the State? He should be all the stronger because he is conversant with both."

"What do you consider will be the main issues of the campaign?"

"It is too early to discuss that yet," Mr. Osborn replied, "but I will say that the question of municipal ownership will enter into the situation. If Mr. Hearst is not the official nominee of the organization it is certain that he will try to dictate the choice of a candidate who will stand for his municipal ownership theories. As to the merits of the question, I do not want to enter upon a discussion at this time."

"How about prohibition?"

"That will be attended to when my campaign gets under way."

"Well, Mr. Smith would make a good Governor, I believe. He is honest and capable, but his nomination would be a bad thing for the Democratic Party. It would be looked upon as a Murphy selection."

Local political and other organizations became active yesterday in sending demands to the Republican and Democratic parties to be considered at their unofficial conventions. The Labor League of New York City, which was organized with the consent of Mayor Hylan, announced through its Secretary, Peter J. Brady, who is also President of the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council, that it was preparing to take a definite stand in the coming campaign and that it had forwarded its State and Federal programs to all Republican and Democratic County Chairmen with the request that the views of the league receive careful consideration at the party conventions at Saratoga.

The Committee on State Affairs of the Brooklyn Democratic Club, of which Charles Harwood is President, has adopted a proposed plank for the Democratic State platform to be submitted at the Saratoga conference. The committee suggests a "win the war" platform, and denounces the "Socialists with Bolsheviki-pro-German tendencies," and also severely arraigns Governor Whitman "for endeavoring to turn the State Government into a menace to further his Presidential aspirations."

Wants League of Nations.

The League to Enforce Peace announced yesterday that it would recommend to every political convention, State, county, and city, held this Summer and Fall, the adoption of a platform containing two fundamental planks, first, that the world must be made safe by the defeat of Germany and second, that the world must be kept safe by the establishment of a League of Nations. The league has addressed to all Democratic and Republican National committeemen, State Chairmen, members of State Executive Committees and County Chairmen a letter calling attention to the fact that both parties at their last national conventions favored the participation of the United States in internationally organized machinery to preserve the peace of the world, and that sixteen State Legislatures have indorsed the same idea by joint resolution.

The People's Ownership League, through its President, Winter Russell, sent yesterday to the Chairman of the Republican State Unofficial Convention at Saratoga a letter asking that the Republican Party place in its platform a plank committing the party to the policy of public ownership and operation of public utilities.

The Coler Citizens' Committee yesterday sent an open letter to the delegates to the Democratic Unofficial Convention advocating the selection of Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Public Charities, as the Democratic candidate for State Controller.

A committee of the Harlem Board of Trade announced last night that its organization had decided to open a business men's political headquarters at the unofficial Democratic convention at Saratoga on Tuesday to urge the nomination for Governor of Cornelius A. Pugsley, President of the Westchester County National Bank of Peekskill and ex-Representative from the Sixteenth Congressional district. The Board of Trade favors a candidate who shall be a "patriotic American and a well-known business man," and their Committee on Public Affairs and Legislation met last night at the board's offices at 11 East 125th Street and voted unanimously to indorse ex-Congressman Pugsley.

Mr. Pugsley, who is the head of a bank in which he began as a clerk in 1870, was a Representative in Congress when the district comprised a northern section of Manhattan, the western part of the Bronx, and a southern slice of Westchester County. He is the President of the State Bankers' Association, President General of the Sons of the American Revolution, and a Director of the National Bankers' Association, and is a member of a number of other business and patriotic organizations.

WANT ROOSEVELT TO LEAD IN STATE

LOOKING FORWARD TO 1920

AIR OF GLOOM OVER CAMP

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 17.—Under murky skies, delegations to the unofficial Republican State Convention, which will open here tomorrow, have been drifting in all day. The hotel corridors are crowded with delegates of both sexes, for women will sit in tomorrow's convention for the first time in the history of one of the major political parties in this State. The women naturally are excited and happy over the new opportunity that has come to them with enfranchisement. The men are a glum and cheerless lot who are discussing the troubles besetting the Republican Party. An air of gloom and inertia has descended on the convention crowd.

It has been a day of bad news and sad experiences. The day was yet young when word was received that Colonel Roosevelt's youngest son, Quentin, had met his death on the western front and that in all probability the Colonel would not be in a position to keep his speaking engagement here tomorrow.

Shortly afterward Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who is making a contest with Governor Whitman for the Republican nomination for Governor, was brought into the hotel in a helpless condition as a result of an automobile accident while on his way from Albany to Saratoga. Mr. Lewis, who has greatly improved under a physician's care, is still confined to his bed, and this naturally has handicapped his followers and greatly retarded the plans for their fight in the convention.

Want Roosevelt to Lead.

This afternoon Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, a nephew of Colonel Roosevelt, and campaign manager for Attorney General Lewis, received a long-distance telephone message from Sagamore Hill informing him that despite the tragic news that had reached him the Colonel would be on hand to address the convention tomorrow afternoon. The news was received with great satisfaction by a majority of the Attorney General's supporters and with mingled feelings by the friends of Governor Whitman.

Many of the latter would have preferred to see the Colonel remain away, for in the wake of the report that he would come, there was a revival of the talk that an attempt would be made again to induce him to become the Republican standard bearer in the fight this Fall.

While persons who enjoy Colonel Roosevelt's confidence declare that all such attempts will go for naught and that the Colonel has made up his mind to stay out of the fight this Fall, there are scores of delegates, some of them well acquainted with the Colonel, who believe that he may be swerved if an impressive demonstration occurs in the convention tomorrow and if it is put up to him as a patriotic duty to take up the fight.

It is known that on the very eve of the convention Republicans have been journeying to Sagamore Hill pleading with the Colonel to run, in order that victory should be assured in a State which must remain in the Republican column this Fall, in order to give the Republicans anything like an even chance to win in 1920. Only on Sunday a Republican leader, not from this State, but of national prominence, went to Sagamore Hill and urged the Colonel to let himself be drafted.

Fear Whitman's Waterloo.

Despite the firm grip that Governor Whitman has on the Republican machine in this State, and despite the impressive majorities by which he has been elected in his two previous campaigns, there seems to be a feeling, even among Republican leaders not unfriendly to him, that he may meet his Waterloo when he attempts to win a third term and place himself in line for the Presidential nomination two years hence. Here is the way one of the most sagacious of the Republican leaders in this State summed up the situation tonight:

"There is nothing to it but Roosevelt, if we have any serious intention of winning this year. What do we care about Whitman, what do we care about Lewis? What we want is to keep this State in the Republican column for 1920. There is only one man who can do that, and that man is Colonel Roosevelt. The Democrats are going to nominate Gerard. That's what they have had in mind all the time. We have no man who can beat Gerard with the exception of Colonel Roosevelt."

"Do you think the Colonel can be induced to run?" was asked.

Expect Great Ovation for Colonel.

It is certain that the Colonel will receive a mighty ovation. Hundreds of former Progressives who have returned to the Republican fold, as has the Colonel, and are here either as delegates, alternates, or visitors, will help to swell the chorus of acclaim that will greet Colonel Roosevelt when he appears in Convention Hall tomorrow. It will signalize the Colonel's triumphant return as leader of the party, a rôle that Governor Whitman has attempted with indifferent success during the years of his Governorship. Many of Colonel Roosevelt's bitterest enemies of old will sit in the convention, but there is no indication that they will be less demonstrative than those who never broke off relations with him.

When the news of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt's death first reached the convention crowd here, George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, immediately sent a message of condolence on behalf of the assembled Republicans. This was followed by a personal message from ex-Congressman W. W. Cocks, Governor Whitman's campaign manager, who is a close friend of the Colonel's.

Attorney General Lewis, when he was carried into the hotel, though weak and suffering, insisted that a message be sent to the Colonel in his name. Hundreds of messages from friends and admirers of Colonel Roosevelt have since gone out from this city to Sagamore Hill.

It is not thought that the injuries sustained by Attorney General Lewis will be serious enough to prevent him from making his fight for the nomination for Governor. He was said tonight to be on the way to rapid recovery, and is resting easy.

He came to his injury while motoring from Albany to this city in a car belonging to First Deputy Attorney General Harold J. Hinman, who is candidate for the nomination for Attorney General on the Lewis primary ticket. The accident occurred about three miles from Saratoga. In the automobile besides Mr. Lewis were his deputy, Mr. Hinman; Clarence J. Shuster of Rochester, one of his campaign managers, and Edward N. Van Cott of Albany, a friend and former employe of Deputy Attorney General Hinman.

How Lewis Was Hurt.

At a steep hill a loaded farm wagon approached from the opposite direction. In front of Mr. Hinman's automobile was a car traveling in the direction of Saratoga also, occupied by Philip Coffey and Joseph Ralph of Troy. Some accident to the top of the car caused them to stop abruptly just as the farm wagon was directly abreast.

There were three courses open to the chauffeur of the car in which Attorney General Lewis rode: to bump into the other motor car, collide with the farm wagon, or go into the ditch. The chauffeur chose the last course, and as he swung sharply to avoid a collision, the car skidded on the road, which was slippery from rain, and finally tipped over. None of the occupants was thrown out, but Mr. Van Cott, who sat between Mr. Lewis and Mr. Schuster, was thrown on top of the Attorney General with some force. Mr. Lewis was the only one in the car to sustain any injury worth mentioning. He was hurried to the hotel here and put to bed. The physician called in said that the patient seemed to suffer more from shock and a severe wrenching of the muscles in his back than anything else.

Work on a tentative platform draft is already under way, although the Committee on Resolutions, to which will fall the task of presenting the final declaration of principles to convention, will not be appointed until at the close of the opening session tomorrow.

Ex-Senator Elihu Root arrived here this afternoon. He is one of the four distinguished Republicans who have been invited to make addresses. Soon after his arrival some of the leaders urged upon Republican State Chairman Glynn the wisdom of giving a proxy to Mr. Root and having him made Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. This suggestion, however, aroused opposition among the friends of Governor Whitman.

Woman to Head Platform Committee.

At a conference of Republican leaders, which broke up after midnight, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, head of the New York City Woman's Suffrage Party and a delegate to the convention from Governor Whitman's district, was decided on for Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, easily the most important of the standing committees. The move was regarded generally as a clever stroke of strategy to win women's votes for the Republican candidates in the campaign and to help Governor Whitman's cause in the primaries.

The selection was by unanimous vote after the Lewis leaders had objected in turn to the selection of either State Insurance Superintendent Phillips or Congressman Bert H. Snell of St. Lawrence. The objection to Mr. Snell was on the ground that he was too young. The so-called Whitman steering committee, before selecting Miss Hay, waited on ex-Senator Elihu Root and asked him to act as Chairman of the committee. Senator Root was well aware of the opposition to him among the Whitman men, and declined.

The Republican State Committee met tonight and ratified the selection of ex-Congressman J. Sloat Fassett of Elmira as temporary Chairman of the convention. Mr. Fassett had been in conference with Governor Whitman in Albany before his arrival here tonight.

It has been urged by Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, and by other Republican leaders of national prominence, that the platform be conceived on such a broad spirit and made so impressive a document that it may serve as a beacon light to guide the party in its campaign for the United States Senate and House of Representatives this Fall and to blaze a trail for the Presidential fight in 1920.

Dr. Butler for Vigorous Declaration.

Dr. Butler is going at his work in that spirit. He said tonight that if he had his way the declaration of principles dealing with national questions would be made a thing apart from the platform declarations on State issues. On these there most likely will be a fight, and if both were presented together Dr. Butler fears that an impression might go broadcast throughout the country and possibly be flashed across the ocean to give aid and comfort to our enemies that the declaration dealing with national questions and the conduct of the war had been a matter of dispute.

"I believe the time has come," said Dr. Butler tonight, "when there should be a declaration of vigor, definiteness, and concreteness, not only on questions growing out of the war, but on the problems of even greater complexity that will arise with the demobilization of our armies and the return of the men now fighting for their country to pursuits of peace. I firmly believe that something should be said now to set the country thinking on this important subject.

"In my opinion there should be a declaration in favor of universal military training so clear and strong, that it cannot be mistaken. Of course, there should be a plank pledging unequivocal support to the Government in its prosecution of the war and a declaration against an inconclusive peace before the enemy has been beaten to a standstill.

"This will practically be the first opportunity our party has had for sending out such a declaration of principles. In 1916 the country was not at war, although the Republican Party wanted it to be in it, and naturally the Republican platform, adopted in Chicago, was written under difficulties. Since then this crisis has passed. We are in the war now and our experiences have given us no end of light on all these great questions.

"There have been Republican conventions in Maine and in Indiana, but they have failed to attract countrywide attention. The presence of Colonel Roosevelt, Senator Root, ex-President Taft, and Chairman Hays of the National Committee will lend to the convention held in this State a national aspect of which we should take the fullest advantage, in my opinion."

Wants No Mention of Prohibition.

After conferences today of Governor Whitman's friends, in which William H. Anderson, Superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon League, has sat, it has been determined that no platform pronunciamento shall be made on the liquor question. Governor Whitman has reached the conclusion that it would be hurtful to the "cause." By keeping any mention of Federal amendment out of the State platform, Governor Whitman's friends hope to avert the alienation of "wet" votes, naturally Republican, that inevitably would follow a reflection of Governor Whitman's personal views on prohibition in that document.

There have been conferences, too, among the friends of Attorney General Lewis, at which prohibition in its relation to the prospective platform has been discussed. The friends of the Attorney General are intent upon a fight in the convention to force the insertion of a plank pronouncing in favor of a State referendum proposing a "dry" amendment to the State Constitution.

The supporters of Mr. Lewis, also, true to the principles he has enunciated in his personal platform, are anxious to have the platform pronounce in favor of a return to the convention system of nominating candidates for State offices. The friends of Governor Whitman, on the other hand, are determined that no such plank shall go in, and that if anything is to be said on the subject in the platform there shall be a blunt declaration in favor of the retention of direct primaries.

Lewis Men in Conference.

As far as one is able to judge tonight, these are the only questions on which there is likely to be a fight in the convention.

A majority of the Republican leaders who were expected here have already arrived. William L. Ward, the veteran chieftain of Westchester County, where the organization is out for Mr. Lewis, came in early this afternoon. William Barnes came in this evening. Lou Payne, the old-time boss of Columbia, looking hale and hearty despite his approach to the nineties, caused a pleasant surprise among the convention crowd by coming in today. Both Senators Wadsworth and Calder have been on hand since late last night.

Ex-Senator Edgar Truman Brackett, whose home is in this city, has been about the hotel corridors all day or in conference with the leaders pledged to Attorney General Lewis. George W. Aldridge, leader of Monroe, is said to be here and secluded at a private house.

Soon after the arrival of Mr. Ward and again after Mr. Barnes had come in there was a conference of Lewis leaders attended by Ward, Barnes, Robert C. Morris of New York, ex-Senator Brackett, Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, Nicholas Murray Butler, Senator Wadsworth, State Senator Slater of Westchester, and others.

It was decided at these conferences that the Lewis men on the Committee on Resolutions would bring in a minority report recommending a State referendum of prohibition and a plank closely following similar declarations adopted in 1914 and again in 1916 at unofficial conventions, pledging the party to the restoration of the convention if returned to power.

The question of placing a candidate in the field against Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck also was discussed informally. This question is to be taken up again tomorrow, when, it is hoped, Mr. Lewis will have been sufficiently recovered to confer with his friends. Former Republican State Chairman Tanner, Senator Slater of Westchester, ex-Borough President Marcus Marks, and Meier Steinbrink, a prominent Brooklyn lawyer, are being talked of as possible candidates.

Women Delegates Active.

Mr. Schoeneck arrived here this afternoon. He made no secret of the fact that he had offered friends of Governor Whitman his resignation as a candidate for renomination in the event that his candidacy should prove embarrassing to the Governor. Mr. Schoeneck, it is known, has been urged to stay in the fight.

There will be more than 400 women among the 2,000 delegates and alternates to the convention. Among them are many who have been active in suffrage organizations. The majority of them are going about proudly wearing Whitman badges and making converts for the Governor among women delegates. The Woman Suffrage Party also is on the ground getting petitions signed to urge the United States Senators from this State to vote for the Federal suffrage amendment.

Senator Wadsworth, who has frankly stated that he is opposed to the amendment, has been a witness to the propaganda in progress in the hotel corridors, largely directed against himself. This evening one woman doing missionary work, handed him a bunch of literature in which he was roundly denounced for opposing the Federal enfranchisement of women.

"I trust you will take this to your room and read it carefully," said the woman, who did not know the Senator.

"I will," said Senator Wadsworth, with a cheerful smile. "I am Senator Wadsworth."

MRS. M. M. HARKNESS WEDS.

Married Quietly at Greenwich to Kennett Cowan.

Mrs. Marie M. Harkness of this city and Kennett Cowan, also of New York, formerly of Chicago, were married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of C. R. Sherlock, Greenwich, Conn. Only a few relatives witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Frank M. Carson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Greenwich.

The bride was divorced from her first husband, Harry S. Harkness, son of the late L. V. Harkness, a Director of the Standard Oil Company, in October, 1916. She was formerly Miss Marie M. Marbeck, and they were married in the early Winter of 1906.

Mr. Harkness, who is a widely known sportsman and the owner of the motor speedway at Sheepshead Bay, was married last November to Mrs. Florence Steuber Gaines of Erie, Penn.

Mason-Miller.

The marriage is announced of Miss Louise R. Miller and Macdonell Mason, which took place on Tuesday at the parish house of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church. The bride is a daughter of the Rev. Dr. J. P. Miller of Minneapolis. Her brother, the Rev. G. Mahlon Miller, is engaged in the Y. M. C. A. army service in France. Mr. Mason is a son of Alfred Bishop Mason of this city, and recently closed his business interests in Cuba and came to this country to enlist. He is stationed at present at Fort Slocum.

SOCIALISTS ACCEPT LONDON AFTER FIGHT

MEETING HELD IN SECRET

Younger Men Said to Have Opposed Approval Because of Attitude Toward Bolsheviki.

The Central Committee of the New York local of the Socialist Party at a meeting held last night at Arlington Hall, 23 St. Mark's Place, confirmed the renomination of Meyer London, Socialist Congressman from the Twelfth Congressional District. The action rescinded the refusal of the committee last Saturday when by a vote of 31 to 28 it decided that London was not desirable as Congressional timber.

The meeting lasted until midnight and it was a stormy one. The debate included arguments on the acts of Meyer London in his declaration in favor of the defeat of Germany, and there were bitter and acrimonious discussions of the Bolsheviki, the recognition of the Soviet Government in Russia, and a host of similar matters.

It was reported that one of the members of the committee called Mr. London on the telephone at his home and asked him concerning some of his moves in Congress. The Congressman was said to have made this curt answer:

"I don't care what the committee does, but you can tell them this—that I'll wipe up the floor with any one who gets in my way."

Unusual precautions were taken to keep the results of the meeting secret. All newspapermen, including representatives of Socialist publications, were excluded from the meeting. Reporters were told after the meeting that Julius Gerber, Secretary of the local branch of the party, would give out the details. Mr. Gerber at first refused to make any statement, but finally said that Mr. London's nomination had been confirmed by "a majority." He refused to give the exact vote, saying "a majority was sufficient." "It's none of the public's business what the vote was," he declared, when pressed for further information. He asked that nothing be published concerning the meeting. Although about 100 persons were present, Mr. Gerber stated that the members bore proxies of 800 members.

The Chairman of the meeting was Joseph Gollomb who, it was said, urged the members to refrain from discussing the meeting with reporters. Secrecy was enjoined on the members several times during the meeting, but considerable news of the meeting leaked out. It was reported that at the meeting one subject of debate was Mr. London's attitude on secret diplomacy. Because of the secretive attitude of the officers and members this could not be affirmed officially though it was said that the socialists were in favor of "open diplomacy at all times," though nothing was said as far as could be learned regarding a frank statement of the proceedings last night. Mr. Gollomb disappeared shortly after the meeting.

The members were unable to conceal the fact that the session was a bitter one and that fist fights had been barely escaped a number of times. When the doors were opened at midnight two men were seen locked in each other's arms, and a group of spectators separated them before blows were struck.

In general the younger men, the "hotheads," urged that London be discarded for renomination because he was not sufficiently "radical" with respect to the Bolsheviki and that he had done little or nothing to advocate the cause of the Lenine-Trotzky faction. It was pointed out that in view of the fact that he was the only Socialist Congressman it was his duty not to assent too readily with the policies of the other parties.

Congressman London was not sufficiently "internationalistic," it was argued, the assertion being made that a man with his "nationalistic" tendencies was not the proper representative for the Socialists in Congress.

The meeting also confirmed the nomination of Morris Hillquit for Socialist candidate in the Twentieth District. It was said that there was no opposition to Mr. Hillquit's nomination.

At the meeting last night the following nominees to Congress were also affirmed: Eleventh District, Eleanor Byrnes; Thirteenth District, Algernon Lee; Fourteenth District, Scott Nearing by a large vote; Fifteenth District, Fannie Witherspoon; Sixteenth District, Samuel E. Beardsley; Seventeenth District, Julius Halpern; Nineteenth District, Theresa Malkiel; Twenty-first District, George F. Miller, and Twenty-second District, Patrick J. Murphy.

A number of Senators and other nominees were also affirmed.

Members of the Italian Embassy, of the Consul General's Office, and other notables reviewed the 4,000 sailors in the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station yesterday afternoon, after being entertained at luncheon at the Colony Club, Sixty-second Street and Park Avenue, by Mrs. Harry Duryea and other patronesses.

Count Macchia di Cellere, the Italian Ambassador, was detained in Washington, being represented by Commander Vannutelli of the Royal Italian Navy. LONDON, July 17.—The work of the British air forces in aerial operations is described tonight in the official statement as follows:

"Thirteen tons of bombs were dropped on hostile airdromes, ammunition dumps, the mole at Zeebrugge, and villages used by the enemy as billets, among them Estaires and Terville.

"Ten enemy machines were brought down in air fighting and four others were driven down out of control. In addition, six hostile balloons were shot down in flames. Nine of our machines are missing."

LABOR URGES ANOTHER SPLASH ON LABOR DAY

WASHINGTON, June 17.—American labor has proposed to the Shipping Board that Labor Day this year shall be made a second Fourth of July in the launching of a record number of ships to help defeat Germany. Chairman Hurley today referred the proposal to Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who will take up the question with unions on the Pacific Coast, where the suggestion originated, with a view to making the celebration national.

Officials of the Shipping Board frankly were gratified by the proposal. They feel, however, that as the suggestion had come spontaneously from the men themselves, so also it should be developed by them, without any urging.

There were ninety-five hulls made ready for launching on July 4, ahead of the time set for their completion. This addition was the greatest ever made to any nation's tonnage in a single day. It is believed an attempt will be made to equal or surpass the record on Labor Day.

FOR 3-WEEK LOAN DRIVE.

Publicity Managers Favor a Shorter Campaign Next Time.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Considerable sentiment in favor of a shorter selling campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan in October than the usual four weeks was reported today by publicity managers from each of the twelve Federal Reserve districts, who conferred with Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity for the Liberty Loan. The publicity men represented that a three weeks' period would eliminate the usual relaxation of effort evident in the middle of the last three loan campaigns.

Liberty Loan posters for the fourth campaign have been selected, but the artists and designs have not yet been announced.

GIANTS SPLIT EVEN WITH MATTY'S REDS

CINCINNATI, July 17.—The best the Giants could get in today's double-header with the Reds was an even break. They lost the first game, 2 to 1, and won the second, 4 to 1. In the first game Pol Perritt had only one bad inning, but that was enough. In the nightcap Cecil Causey was in fine form and held the Reds to seven scattered hits, while his teammates were plugging away at the offerings of Hod Eller.

The Giants made thirteen hits off Pete Schneider in the opener, and, besides, received the benefits of two bases on balls and one Cincinnati error, yet so powerless were they in the pinches that they were lucky to score even one run. They had innumerable opportunities to wipe out the Reds' slender lead, but could not take advantage of them.

They scohed their only run in the fifth inning. McCarty led off and drew a pass, and was sacrificed to second by Perritt. Burns lifted a fly to Neale, but Young singled to centre, scoring McCarty. Young stole third, but was left at that bag when Fletcher fanned.

Their lead went for naught, however, as the Reds pulled out in front in their half of the same inning. After Blackburne had popped to Rariden, Wingo singled to left, and Schneider singled to centre. Perritt then let go a wild pitch on which Mingo dashed all the way to the plate, and Schneider reached third, and Pete tallied on Groh's sacrifice fly to Burns. That ended the scoring for both sides.

McGraw's men made a good start in the second game, nicking Eller for a run in the first inning. Burns led off with a double to right center, and Young's sacrifice moved him along to third. Fletcher then hoisted a sacrifice fly to Griffith, and Burns ambled home.

They were held in restraint until the sixth, when a sudden switch to the bunting game enabled them to put Eller in a hole. Rariden singled to right. Causey dropped a bunt in front of the plate and beat it out, and Burns then dragged one down the base line, beating it out and filling the bases. Young hit to Lee Magee, who pegged to Wingo, forcing Rariden at the plate, and Fletcher forced Young, Lee Magee to Blackburne, but Causey scored on the play.

Doyle poked a single to right, scoring Burns and putting Fletcher on third, after which Fletcher and Doyle worked a double steal, the former scoring. The great Zim, who had a bad day with the stick, failing to get a hit in either game, ended the inning by being thrown out by Blackburne.

The Reds went along for seven innings with only two men getting past second base, but in the eighth they managed to put a run over the plate. Groh opened the frame with a double down the right field foul line, went to third on Lee Magee's out, and scored when Roush grounded to Holke.

CUBS WIN IN 21 INNINGS.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Establishing a season's record for extra innings and coming within one inning of the league record, Chicago today defeated Philadelphia 2 to 1 in a 21-frame pitchers' duel between Watson and Tyler.

The National League extra-inning record was established n 1917, when Brooklyn and Pittsburgh went 22 innings. Philadelphia and Boston established the American League record in 1906, when they played 24 innings.

Manager Mitchell's mobilization of his pinch-hitting reserve in the twenty-first won for Chicago. Barber, batting for Zeider, singled; Watson hit Killefer, and McCabe, batting for Tyler, beat out a bunt, filling the bases, with none out. Flack then delivered his fifth hit of the game, scoring Barber.

In the first Flack's walk, a single and an infield out gave Chicago its first run. Philadelphia tied in the fourth on Hollocher's fumble of Williams's grounder, followed by safe hits by Stock and Luderus. Hollocher's bobble was the only one made on either side, the Phillies playing errorless ball in support of Watson.

KUMAGAE TO DEFEND STATE TENNIS TITLE

UTICA, N. Y., July 17.—Ichya Kumagae, the sturdy little Japanese who was the tennis sensation of the season of 1916, will have the opportunity of defending his title of New York State singles champion in a challenge round of the annual tournament which began today on the courts of the Yahnundasis Club. The son of Nippon is the holdover champion from two years ago, and is now hurrying East from Seattle to take part in the round of tournament play leading up to the national championships at Forest Hills.

The start of the singles tournament today was rather inauspicious. A heavy shower during the early morning deluged the courts, and for a time it seemed as if play for the day would have to be abandoned. Late in the afternoon a start was made, but there was another rainstorm, which again held up for more than an hour.

The early rounds failed to bring a clash between some of the prominent younger players who are sprinkled freely through the draw. All of them came through early matches without experiencing a real test of skill, and one, Harold Taylor, advanced through a third round match, defeating George H. Sicard, 6—2, 7—5. Frank Anderson, Fred C. Anderson, Cecil Donaldson, and Gerald Emerson were among those who won their way to advanced positions.

Of the veterans competing there was chief interest for the play of Ward Dawson, the California expert, who was Maurice McLoughlin's partner in the national doubles championship of two years ago. These two were defeated in the challenge round by William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin.

Dawson won a first round match by the default of his opponent, and then was pitted against James S. O'Boyle, the former Georgetown star. In this contest the honors went to Dawson at 6—2, 2—6, 6—2. Although Dawson has had very little opportunity for practice this season, he lived up to the traditions of California tennis in defeating his Eastern rival. In many respects his game was a reincarnation of his best days on the courts; there was an aggressiveness in his play that was more than O'Boyle could withstand. His shots were working smoothly, and while there were times when he was unsteady, especially in the second set, his play was such as to arouse respect from those who will be his antagonists and to win applause from the gallery.

RED SOX GET TWO GAMES.

Win First by 7 to 0 and Lead the Browns by 4 to 0 in Second BOSTON, July 17.—Boston took both games today from St. Louis, the first 7 to 0, with Bush having the better of Wright, and the second, 4 to 0, in five innings, called on account of rain.

Ruth pitched the second game and made two doubles in two times at bat. In the fourth inning of the second game Schang and Severeid clinched at the plate, a few blows were exchanged and both players were ordered out of the game. Schang claimed Severeid was unnecessarily rough in tagging him out at the plate.

MISS STIRLING AND BOBBY JONES LOSE

Playing together as partners, Miss Elaine Rosenthal and Perry Adair finished on the winning side of a four-ball Red Cross match against Miss Alexa Stirling and Bobby Jones on the links of the Montclair Golf Club yesterday. So as to have it a four-ball contest, in fact as well as name, these players had agreed to have the scoring by points instead of holes. The best ball counts a point and also the aggregate, so that figuring it that way, Miss Rosenthal and Adair won by four points. They were three up at match play.

Individually Jones had the best score of the four, going out in 39 and coming back in 37 for a 76. Adair had a 79, while Miss Rosenthal with an 83 led the woman's national champion by two shots. A comparison of their cards also reveals the fact that Miss Rosenthal at match play would have defeated Miss Stirling, 2 and 1. Jones would have beaten Adair by the same margin.

Jones scored first for his side by winning the second hole in 4, none of the others being able to reach the green on their second shots. The woman champion and Jones also won the third, where Miss Rosenthal got badly bunkered and her partner fell green-shy on his second shot after a beautiful drive. Jones lost a chance to halve the fifth hole by taking three putts, Miss Stirling landing in a trap there.

The sixth is 550 yards, of the elbow formation, with the second shot downhill. Adair, with a fine ball that carried the point of the woods, and then broke sharply to the right, got so well on his way toward the green that he was able to get home with a half-iron for his second. Miss Stirling also hitting a long ball, went past the point and the ball was yards down the hill before it came to rest. This enabled her to get near the green on her second shot and supplementing that with an accurate chip, she got down the putt for a 4, the same as her partner. Neither of the others could do better than 5.

Adair won the eighth and ninth holes in 4 and 3, respectively, Jones missing a short putt on the ninth green. That left Miss Rosenthal and Adair one up at the turn, or 2 points to the good. All got 5s at the eleventh except Miss Rosenthal, but in getting her 5 Miss Stirling had to hole quite a putt.

Adair won the twelfth in 3, while Miss Rosenthal with a fine 3 at the fourteenth, won there. This hole is 262 yards down hill, but the Ravisloe girl nearly drove the green. They all got 3s at the fifteenth, while at the sixteenth and seventeenth Adair drove out of bounds. Jones won the seventeenth in 4, bringing off a forty-foot putt.

By winning the home hole in 4, Adair placed his side 3 up and a winner by 4 points. The best ball read 73 to 75 in favor of Miss Rosenthal and Adair.

A tug of war with fifty sailors on each team was only one of many exciting events at the athletic competition held at Mrs. E. N. Breitung's sailors' club and athletic field at the foot of Ninety-sixth Street yesterday under the auspices of the New York War Camp Community Service. The event was won by Ensign Harold Jenny's first division team from the U. S. training ship Granite State.

The ten-oared cutter race, with three crews entered, was won by the crew from the Federal Rendezvous at Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn, with the Granite State crew second and the Armed Guard cutter third. The Granite State oarsmen took the lead soon after the start and were in the lead at the mile, but the Brooklyn sailors went to the front and won the two-mile event by about three lengths.

Andrew Miller's Roamer further demonstrated his remarkable return to first-class form when he picked up 133 pounds and won the Mount Vernon Handicap at a mile, which was the feature of the card at Empire City yesterday. Though only two horses opposed the rejuvenated son of Knight Errant, both were noted performers, yet Roamer gave away weight to Old Koenig and Papp, let them make all the pace, and at the finish ran over them, to score handily by a length and a half.

Following his victory with Roamer Lyke had the mount on James Murphy's Elderken, the choice for the fifth race at a mile and seventy yards. Elderken was sideway when the barrier went up and Lyke had to ride one of his best races in order to land the favorite a winner. Harry Burgoyne, which was off winging, had a couple of lengths to spare entering the stretch, and Elderken at first refused to increase his speed when Lyke began to urge him to do his best. Many a jockey would have accepted defeat, but the star of the day kept at work with undiminished vigor and in the last hundred yards his efforts were rewarded for Elderken jumped forward in the closing strides, to win by a neck.

O'LEARY TIRES COURT WITH STORY OF LIFE

MAY CALL HENRY A. WISE

Lawyer's Letter on War Read Into Record—Jury Asks for Longer Hours to Finish Case.

John J. O'Leary, on trial before Judge A. N. Hand and a jury in the Federal District Court, charged with conspiring to aid in the escape from the jurisdiction of the courts of his brother Jeremiah, went on the witness stand in his own behalf yesterday. It was an hour before the end of the day's session and under the direct examination of his counsel, Colonel Thomas B. Felder, the defendant began to describe the events of his life from the age of 5.

At the beginning of the narrative the jurors leaned forward intently listening to the detailed story of the defendant, but after he had spent almost an hour in describing the hardships of his childhood and youth and his business relations with various persons, Judge Hand interrupted to request that the witness tell his story in a general way. The Judge said that the time of the jury could not be spent in listening to so many details.

O'Leary again launched into his story but was again asked by Judge Hand to be more concise. At the end of the day's session Judge Hand announced that the jurors had asked to be permitted to sit longer hours in the case in order that it might be finished this week. In order to do this, he said, a session would be held on Saturday, and the morning sessions would hereafter begin promptly at 10 o'clock and not at 10:30.

Under direct examination John O'Leary said he was 39 years old, was born in Glens Falls, N. Y., and was a lawyer. His father, he said, was "poor in money but rich in character." The defendant said that at an early age he delivered newspapers for $1 a week and helped his father milk the family cows. This lasted until he was 13 years old, when he went to an Albany business school, where he took day and night courses in stenography, typewriting, and bookkeeping. He was graduated at the age of 15 and went to work as a stenographer. His hours were from 6:30 A. M. to 7:30 P. M., and he received $4 a week. But three months later he obtained a better job that paid $5 a week for only ten hours a day.

His Start in the Law.

A year later, said the defendant, he became secretary to Senator Jacob Cantor at a salary of $90 a month and volunteered his services when the Spanish war began. He was 17 at the time, and because of his proficiency in typewriting and shorthand was kept in the army as a clerk. Later he "read Blackstone and ran errands" in a law office.

Describing his attendance at the New York Law School, O'Leary told of the various business connections he made when he was graduated. While employed by a law firm in which James Byrne was a partner, he said that Mr. Byrne assigned to him the power of attorney and he sold for Mr. Byrne the latter's Long Island home to John D. Archbold for a sum "closer to a million dollars than a hundred thousand" and reinvested the money in stocks.

O'Leary went into a vacation he took in 1915, when he visited the Adirondacks "and visited all the battlefields of the Revolutionary War." He was married in 1906 and has seven children living and one dead. Coming to recent events, the witness said he had never had any business relations with his brother Jeremiah up to a comparatively short time ago. He said he had a violent disagreement with his brother on one occasion and it took a long time to make that up.

Asked whether it was their first violent disagreement, the witness said he had violent disagreements with Jeremiah from the time "we were able to use our fists." He said he met Jeremiah occasionally at "Irish historical and language societies." In response to a question he said that there was nothing about "Irish freedom" in the organizations, that their purpose was not propaganda, but purely cultural, an attempt to revive the study of Irish history and of the Gaelic language.

Prior to placing the defendant on the stand Colonel Felder read to the jury a letter received by John from Henry A. Wise, who was at first retained to defend Jeremiah O'Leary. In the letter Mr. Wise said he was a professional soldier, having served in Cuba, and he felt certain that the Government in a few weeks from the time he was writing would call for a million or more men.

The letter said that when the call came Mr. Wise would respond. He said he felt an obligation to do so, and thought he could do nothing knowingly that would prevent his going. He said the officers of the Government were so "bitter" that if he defended Jeremiah "they would treat me as they treated General Wood, and would refuse my services." Mr. Wise declared he had no qualms in representing Jeremiah, but he did not desire to do anything that would jeopardize his opportunity to serve the country, and he added that he hoped that John would realize his position and allow him to retire from the case.

The letter was a long one, and went into detail regarding Mr. Wise's many business engagements, also calling attention to his extremely busy calendar. There was no objection by Earl Barnes, Assistant United States District Attorney, to the letter going in as evidence, and it is likely that Mr. Wise may be asked by the prosecutor to appear and testify as to certain parts of the communication.

O'Leary's Parents Called.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Leary, Sr., the defendant's parents; Dr. Daniel O'Leary and Alexis O'Leary, his brothers, also testified in the case yesterday.

When the father of the defendant was called to the stand it was the first time he participated in the trial. He said that up to three years ago his son Jeremiah had attended to his law business, but since then he had neglected it for politics. Regarding these activities, the father said the members of the family thought that Jeremiah should have stuck "to his last" instead of becoming engaged in "less profitable matters." It was the belief of the family also, he said, that Jeremiah should have ceased being so active in politics after this country entered the war.

Mr. O'Leary said he knew Jeremiah had made a trip to Reno on a business matter, but he did not learn of it until after his son's return. He declared that nobody in the family knew that Jeremiah intended making his second trip. His first knowledge that his son was in the West, he said, was when the reports of his arrest in Washington were published.

On cross-examination by Mr. Barnes, Dr. O'Leary, the defendant's brother, said that the last time he had seen Jeremiah before the latter's trial was due to be called was at the hospital following his operation.

The witness said he did not ask John regarding Jeremiah on May 11, when the defendant appeared at Newburg, the doctor's home, with Jeremiah's car. The prosecution has contended that John, in aiding his brother to escape, attempted to conceal Jeremiah's car and took it to Newburg for that purpose. Questioned further, Dr. O'Leary could not recall whether John had asked him if Jeremiah had been to see him after May 7, the day he disappeared. He said Jeremiah was not much in his thoughts at the time.

Dr. O'Leary admitted that in his testimony before the Grand Jury, when he was questioned concerning his brother's disappearance, he had testified that he assumed Jeremiah was still in New York. He said that on May 11 he asked John how Jeremiah was getting on, but could recall no further conversation on the subject of Jeremiah.

Anxious About Jeremiah.

From May 18, the witness testified, he knew that John was anxious concerning Jeremiah, and said he received a telegram from the defendant that day inquiring for Jeremiah. The doctor also said John asked him to send him news of Jeremiah. On one of John's frequent visits to Newburg, the doctor said, the defendant told him he was going north to find Jeremiah.

When called to the office of Mr. Barnes, for examination before the Grand Jury, Dr. O'Leary declared that the prosecutor was "mean and nasty." He denied emphatically that Mr. Barnes, at the Grand Jury proceeding, had told him that his father, John, Alexis, and the other members of the family had made misstatements. He had been warned, he said, that any statements he might make could be used against him, and he said he was warned to be extremely careful as to his testimony.

Mr. Barnes was not satisfied with this answer and asked the witness if he had not told him he was tired of having misstatements made by the O'Leary family. This line of cross-examination was excluded by the court. The efforts made by Mr. Barnes to prove that the doctor knew the Government believed that Jeremiah had run away, also were excluded by the court. It was ruled that the motives, behind the prosecution or the defense were equally irrelevant, and that the sole question was as to the innocence or guilt of the defendant. Dr. O'Leary said that Mr. Barnes, at the Grand Jury proceeding, seemed "much put out" because he, the witness, "would not tell the kind of story Mr. Barnes wanted."

After the introduction of another character witness, whose testimony was along lines similar to previous character witnesses, Mrs. Margaret O'Leary, the defendant's mother, was called. Her testimony did not vary greatly from the story she told at the mistrial. She gave testimony as to her birth, marriage, and family. She said she was born in Ireland and was married in 1878 and had seven children, five of whom were boys. She could not remember the age of her husband, but said she thought he was seventy-five.

Alexis O'Leary, brother of the defendant, said he had been subpoenaed by the Government at the former trial. He said he was in the employ of the Public Service Commission and was engaged in work in connection with subway construction. He tried to enlist, he said, but was rejected because of trouble with his eyes.

The witness was examined concerning a gathering of the O'Leary family at 1,229 Madison Avenue, his father's home. This took place before Jeremiah departed, and the witness declared it was not "a farewell party" to Jeremiah. He added that every one in the family had been urging Jeremiah to go away in order to rest up from the effects of his operation.

MORE FOR MRS. MITCHEL.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—In connection with the publication of Major John Purroy Mitchel's will it became known that just before leaving Washington to undergo instruction at an army aviation school in California, Major Mitchel went to the office of the Secretary of the Treasury and made inquiries of Mr. McAdoo's secretary as to the method of taking out soldier's insurance. He read the law on the subject and studied application blanks and before leaving made out an application for $10,000, the maximum amount, naming his wife as the beneficiary. Major Mitchel said good-bye to Secretary McAdoo on that occasion. Under the terms of the policy, it was said at the Treasury Department today, Mrs. Mitchel will receive $57.50 a month for twenty years.

In the account of the filing of the will of Major John Purroy Mitchel, THE TIMES stated yesterday, that one of the witnesses was Herman Knoblauch, a clerk in the office of Edwin H. Updike, a lawyer, who was named as an executor. THE TIMES learned yesterday that the witness was Herman Knobloch, a real estate and insurance broker, who attends to such matters in the office of Mr. Updike.

DROWNED IN LIFEBOAT DRILL

Two Porto Rican Seamen Lost When 27 of Crew Fall Into Water.

Lassaimo Duzal and Ramon Rios, Porto Rican seamen on a steamship moored at a pier in Brooklyn, were drowned yesterday afternoon when they fell out of a lifeboat which, they and twenty-five others of the crew were lowering so that the United States Local Inspection Board could see that all the life-saving gear was in order.

When the boat was fifteen feet from the water the twenty-seven men got in and the forward ring which held the bow tackle gave way and all were thrown into the harbor. Tugs, motor launches, and rowboats in the vicinity came to the rescue, and all but Duzal and Rios were picked up. Duzal's body was recovered later and the police are searching for that of the other seaman.

Steamship Napoli Lost.

According to a report received yesterday by marine insurance officials in this city, the Italian steamship Napoli was sunk a few days ago in a collision in the Mediterranean near Genoa. The Napoli was formerly in the passenger and freight trade between New York and Genoa. She was a twin-screw, four-masted steel ship of 9,210 gross tons, built by Palmer & Sons of Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1899.

DENIES IMPERIALISM IS ITALY'S WAR AIM

PROBLEMS OF PEACEMAKING

Tells City College Hearers Nationality and Self-Determination Cannot Be Absolute.

Italian war aims are not imperialistic, but may be defined as the desire for a reasonable frontier, according to Felice Ferrero, Director of the Italian Bureau of Information, who lectured on that topic at the City College yesterday morning.

"The first aim of Italy is victory," he said, "but of course victory must necessarily lead to some territorial readjustments in Europe, such as the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France and certain questions affecting Italy. Because of what Italy has been supposed to expect in this direction she has been accused of imperialism and has been criticised on that account, which we think is not quite fair. This criticism is based on the treaty concluded when Italy entered the war in 1915, and published last winter by Leon Trotzky, according to which Italy was to receive a part of Asia Minor, the Irredenta inhabited by Italians in Austria, and also certain parts of Dalmatia which were inhabited chiefly by Slavs and districts in Tyrol, inhabited chiefly by Germans.

"So far as Asia Minor is concerned, it is hardly fair to talk about Italian imperialism; it was not a case of concessions to Italy, but of a proposal to divide Asia Minor into four spheres of influence for England, France, Italy, and Russia. France and England very nearly divide Africa between them, but this does not mean imperialism; everybody knows that the African races are incapable of ruling themselves, and that the condition of Africa was such while they were independent that it was a thorn in the side of the world.

"Not until France and England were in control was navigation safe along the coast of Africa, was slavery abolished, nor was the country safe for the entry of Europeans. This was not imperialism, but a civilizing influence. The population of Asia Minor has never shown any indication of capacity for ruling itself, and the division into spheres of influence was a guarantee to the world at large of the introduction of civilization in place of Turkish rule. But at any rate that has now been abandoned, and what will become of Asia Minor no one knows.

"So far as Dalmatia and parts of the Tyrol are concerned, there is no question that the arrangements of the treaty of 1915 would bring considerable numbers of Slavs and Germans under Italian rule. Objection has been made to this on two principles—the idea of nationality and that of self-determination of peoples. But we are fighting, not for incorporeal principles, but to bring about practical results.

"Both of these principles are very well in their way, but they cannot be applied absolutely; we should avoid the mistake of thinking that an absolute rule of justice can be applied to the settlement of the affairs of Europe. There will always be some one who is not satisfied. The principle of nationality will not work in practical applications. For example, all accept the idea that Alsace-Lorraine must be returned to France. But the French are hardly claiming this on the principle of nationality, for a very large part of the population of Alsace at least is German and speaks German, although the people prefer France.

"Another case is that of the Poles. We have promised to accord freedom to all the Slav nations, including Poland, and according to President Wilson Poland should receive an outlet to the sea, which is quite reasonable. But Poland cannot get such an outlet without annexing some territory occupied by Germans—Königsberg, Danzig, or both. Here is another case where the principle of nationality can be accepted only conditionally, due to very reasonable political considerations. The same is true of the Jewish State in Palestine, a country inhabited chiefly by Arabs. Sentimental reasons prevail over strict considerations of race.

"The same is true in large measure with the theory of self-determination. Suppose a plebiscite were held in Alsace-Lorraine today, while the Germans are still in occupation. No matter how strong might be the sympathy for France, the people would vote nine to one in favor of staying with Germany because the Germans are there. If a plebiscite were taken under French supervision after Alsace-Lorraine had been returned to France, the vote would be overwhelmingly for union with France. We feel sure that in this case the vote would be quite sincere, but the Germans would never believe it. The application of the principle of self-determination is always likely to leave doubt and distrust.

"No principle can be applied in an absolute way to the solution of the problem of Italy's eastern frontier. So we have the application of another principle, which may be called the rule of reason, which was manifested in the Congress of Oppressed Austrian Nationalities, held at Rome in April. There the Italians and the Jugoslavs composed their differences, arguing very reasonably that there was no use in squabbling over Austrian territory when all of Serbia and part of Italy were occupied by the Austrians. 'Get rid of the Austrians, then adjust your boundaries by amicable agreement'—this principle was accepted by both sides, with the resultant growth of friendship between two nations formerly hostile. While not definite delimitation was agreed upon, it was admitted in a general way that Italy has a right to extend her boundaries to a point which would afford military protection to her frontier, even if it takes in some Slavic or German groups. In some places Jugoslavs will rule Italians, in others Italians will rule Jugoslavs; and with the friendly relations between the two peoples each will accord the greatest freedom to the minorities of the other within its boundaries. This new principle of the 'reasonable frontier' was recognized by President Wilson in his message to Italy on the anniversary of her entry into the war.

"Italy in this way will get protection of her coasts by some naval bases. It may be said that Jugoslavia will be a small State and unlikely to be a menace to Italy. This is true, but we do not know who will be on the other side of Jugoslavia. If the Austro-Hungarian monarchy breaks up on racial lines, that neighbor would very likely be Germany, and Jugoslavia, like Belgium, would be too weak to stand against a German onslaught, so some protection would be necessary. In other words, this is not imperialism, but a desire to find a reasonable solution of the problems at issue, to arrive at an amicable adjustment, to find a way for Italy to live in peace and good relations with all her neighbors."

Dress Goods Openings Far Off.

Formal openings of dress goods for the Spring, 1919, season, if they take place at all, are still not in sight. Information current in the primary end of the local market for this merchandise is to the effect that no one knows at the moment just what can be done in this respect, or when. An executive of one of the largest dress goods concerns in the country, when asked yesterday if his firm would have a formal opening this week, replied: "Not this week, not this month, and not next month. Further than that I cannot predict." Market comment is to the effect that the Government has as yet let out no wool for use in cloth for next Spring's civilian trade, and probably will not until the authorities are thoroughly assured that military requirements for some time to come are fully covered by the existing supply. The distribution of the surplus remaining can then be worked out. Until that time, it is said, one man's guess is as good as another's as to when civilian goods will be offered for next Spring and how much of this merchandise will be available.

Drug Prices Still Mounting.

The market for crude drugs and pharmaceutical chemicals shows the effect of the growing scarcity of supplies, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Domestic refined and Japanese camphor has advanced in price. Seeds, herbs and leaves are unsettled. Sacharin prices are being manipulated, it is asserted in the trade, by interests anxious to realize on accumulated stocks. Dyewoods and dye bases are increasing in price, owing to the lack of shipping facilities. Crudes and intermediates are firm. War demands have caused a scarcity of many of these products. In heavy chemicals the feature of the last week has been a drop of 3 cents in caustic potash, which is now quoted at 77¼ to 79 cents a pound.

Good buying of ready-to-wear garments by Canadian retailers now in this market is told of, in spite of the high prices at which this merchandise has to be sold across the border. According to a buyer from Toronto, women's suits that formerly wholesaled here around $27.50 now cost in the neighborhood of $35. To this advanced price, it is pointed out, must be added a duty of 40 per cent., which increases materially the ultimate cost of the garments to the consumers. The buyer in question asserted, however, that the consumers pay this increased cost without complaint, which seems to be borne out by his further assertion that his receipts from garment sales so far this year have been the greatest in the last five.

Suit Blouses Back Again.

The suit blouse, which gained such a wide following last Winter, is coming in strong again this Fall. Buyers now in town seem very partial to this type of waist, and considerable business has resulted. Georgette and crêpe de chine, together with a few novelty silks of somewhat heavier weight, are the favored fabrics for these waists. Various combinations of harmonizing and contrasting colors are eagerly sought. Beige and navy blue is a popular combination, as is buff and taupe. Both tight and flaring cuffs are seen. Beaded designs are high in favor with the buyers as trimmings.

Smart hats in a combination of strips of heavy satin and beaver have made their appearance here. The bodies of these hats are made of heavy satin and have a two or three-inch flange of long-knap beaver. The shapes include large effects; both with drooping and irregular brims. In the latter one side of the brim is very large and the other shows a sharp upturned effect. The crowns are made of folds of satin with a narrow strip of beaver around the side crown, finished off with a small tailored bow. Navy blue is apparently the favored shade in these hats, which, although they are made of heavy materials, are said not to be "heavy looking" and to be suitable for wear with soft Summer frocks.

The use of starch in tomato sauce employed in packing sardines is now considered adulteration by the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, according to an announcement of the National Canners' Association, which says: "Dr. C. L. Alsberg, Chief of the bureau, in a letter states that a large number of packers of food products who use tomato sauce have been interviewed and their opinion requested on the propriety of the use of starch in the preparation of this sauce. By far the greater number of these packers are of the opinion that starch is not a proper ingredient of tomato sauce and its use is simply that of a substitute or cheapener. This view is concurred in by the bureau, and in the enforcement of the Food and Drugs act the presence of starch in tomato sauce used in the packing of sardines will be considered an adulteration.

"Styles in underskirts for women," said an authority in this trade yesterday, "are tending strongly toward simple, tailored designs and the more durable fabrics. Elaborate petticoats of crepe de chine or georgette crepe are giving way to wash satins, for instance, in more or less staple shades. Striped, plaid or small-figured designs on black backgrounds are about the most striking effects the present market will absorb in any quantity. The war and war work are chiefly responsible, I believe, for this condition. With so many of the country's women engaged in war activities of a kind that require simple garments, if not an actual uniform, the call for elaborate underskirts has become very limited."

Serge and Worsted Skirts Wanted.

An active demand is reported throughout the country for separate skirts of serge in plain tailored models for street and business wear. It seems, however, that not all manufacturers are in a position, due to the scarcity of serges, to accept all the business they feel they can get in these lines. Good quality serges are wanted above all others. Worsted skirts are also sought, and the same conditions apply largely to them as to serge skirts. Navy blue and very dark gray, in pepper and salt effects, seem to be the most popular shades. Black is sought in constantly increasing quantities and bids fair, before the season is over, to figure very prominently in the business done.

Many of the high-class local shops have lately been experiencing an increasing demand for more simple and less expensive gowns for both afternoon and evening wear, according to a bulletin of the National Garment Retailers' Association. It quotes a designer as follows: "Women are once more beginning to demand actual value in the garment they buy. This does not mean, however, that they are sacrificing style to economy. They simply demand a combination of good materials and good lines. For several years many women of the wealthy and middle classes have been buying their gowns largely because they liked the sleeve effect, the trimming, or the color. The quality of the material was then the last thing to be considered." In accordance with the changed demand, the bulletin adds, many of the leading houses are showing simpler styles in their latest Fall offerings.

Gray Goods Demand Fair.

No great snap was visible to trading in the local gray goods market yesterday, but further business was done, some of it ranging into October, on such printcloths as 39-inch 68-72s, 38½-inch 64-60s, and 38½-inch 60-48s on the fixed basis of 83 cents a pound. Little was said about sheetings, from all accounts, but sales at "top" market prices, subject to later revision, were made of sateens, twills and other specialties. Second hands were not very important factors in yesterday's selling.

FAVORS PRICE SCALE FOR OIL INDUSTRY

PREMIUMS ALSO ARRANGED

On the request of Mark L. Requa, the Fuel Oil Administrator, to fix a scale of prices and premiums for crude oil in all regions where it was produced, A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the National Petroleum War Service Committee, forwarded yesterday recommendations on distribution and price control. In suggesting methods of control the committee said that it had studied the crude oil markets with two objects: To stabilize prices in producing fields and to maintain "the continuous and uninterrupted flow of crude oil in its present channels." The committee suggested also that the Fuel Oil Administrator visit the producers in the Gulf Coast region and that the suggestions on prices be on trial until Nov. 1, 1918.

In the Appalachian region it was suggested that the producers should make monthly sales of crude oil and that the purchasing companies buy at the posted price with a premium of not more than 10 cents. In the mid-continent region it was suggested that the companies buy at the posted price with a maximum premium of 25 cents on all crude oils except four, and the committee adds that this premium is set "with the strict understanding that in no district in which premiums are being paid of less than 25 cents a barrel will the Oil Administration permit the paying of a higher premium than is now in effect." Throughout the region including Kansas, Oklahoma, and Northern Texas, buyers are permitted to pay these maximum premiums on four crude oils; Cushing, 75 cents; Garber and Billings, $1; Kay County, 60 cents, and Healdton, 30 cents.

In the Gulf Coast and Northern Louisiana region it is ruled that purchasing companies shall establish a posted price of $1.80 a barrel, effective until Nov. 1, with a maximum premium of 10 cents except that in districts where the premium has been less than 10 cents it shall continue at the old rate. It is provided also that in the Gulf region a differential of 25 cents a barrel be established between the Gulf Coast oil and the Northern Louisiana heavy oil below 34 degrees gravity, with a 10 cent premium. On light crude oil a premium of 25 cents is allowed except in districts where the premium has been lower.

It was suggested by the committee that no purchasing company would be allowed to take away runs of oil from a regular buyer without the consent of the Fuel Oil Administrator. It is specified also that the recommendations "are not to affect any existing contracts for crude oil except such contracts as have been recently entered into which the Oil Administrator feels are contrary to the policy outlined in his letter of May 17, 1918."

The adoption of a scale of prices for all producers was suggested by Mr. Requa after producers in the mid-continent and other regions had raised prices. Recommendations may be made later to control prices in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions.

It was announced yesterday that the Independent Oil Men's Association, comprising producers in all parts of the country, would meet here in October to consider prices and methods of distribution.

AUCTION PROCTOR BUILDING.

The biggest foreclosure sale ever held in Yonkers took place yesterday when the Proctor Building at the corner of South Broadway and Prospect Street was sold at auction to Edward Murphy of Troy, N. Y., for $300,000. Incumbrances on the property amounted to $294,000. The plaintiff was J. Romaine Brown, a real estate dealer of New York City, who held a mortgage on the property for $250,000.

When the bidding was opened in the Yonkers City Hall, the property was awarded to J. O. London of 2 Rector Street, New York, who bid $376,000. Since he did not give a certified check for 5 per cent. of the amount bid, as required, the property was ordered resold. Mr. Murphy, who had been outbid in the first instance, obtained it for less than he had offered when bidding against Mr. London.

Rescind Ban on Copra Imports.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The limitations imposed by the War Trade Board on June 25 upon the importation of copra (cocoanut meat broken, but not shredded, desiccated, or prepared) have now been rescinded. New applications for licenses to import copra will be considered. The restriction imposed upon the importation of shredded, desiccated, or prepared cocoanut meat, otherwise known as "Ceylon copra," remains in force, and, according to the new ruling, none will be admitted except such ocean shipments as were made on or before June 30.

Among the entertainers was Yeoman F. Edna Joyce, who sang to the accompaniment of the U. S. S. "Recruit" Band. FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Pause as News of War Is Awaited—Large Bank Transactions Today.

The irregularity which marked yesterday's operations in the stock market appeared to reflect the desire of traders to wait for further news from the great battle in France before expressing their sentiments in a substantial fashion through either purchases or sales. On Monday prices were depressed for a time when the first news came of the German attack, only to rise again before the close when it became evident that the French and Americans were offering a generally successful resistance. On Tuesday the optimistic dispatches promoted some new buying, and yesterday it appeared clearer than on either of the two preceding days that more time must elapse before a comprehensive view of the war situation in the really essential details could be obtained, and business in securities turned dull and featureless. Certain of the stocks which had risen with vigor the day before moved downward a point or so in the forepart of the session, recovering part of the decline later.

When the financial community is able to divide its attention again between developments in Europe and incidents of business and industry at home, it is probable that the scope of Government demands in many lines will become the subject of more study than in the last few months. In the steel trade it is becoming more apparent that war needs and the demands attendant upon the nation's participation in the contest are growing beyond the measure calculated even as late as last May. News from Washington that the War Industries Board had held small hope out to the automobile industry for securing more than 25 per cent. on its normal supply of steel was significant of what is going on. The Iron Age notes that the checking up of figures on production and demand from the Allies, including the United States, has narrowed the margin of probable production and consumption by these all-dominant buyers. This comment is well worthy of notice, inasmuch as it was expected in well-informed quarters of the steel trade only a few weeks ago that the margin might possibly expand after the turn of the half-year. What is going on in case of steel holds true to an important extent in other lines of manufacture, and indicates that private business will find it necessary to readjust itself much further as time passes to the task of winning the war.

Today subscribers are to put through payment of the third installment of the Third Liberty Loan, amounting to 35 per cent., and more than $500,000,000 Treasury certificates fall due. The banks are scheduled to transfer to the Federal Reserve Bank, for the account of the Treasury, the remaining 60 per cent. of the proceeds of the first Fourth Liberty Loan certificate offering, which has been on deposit with them. These huge transactions are expected to be handled as easily as others of the past, but they do not forecast an easement of money rates. Call money continued stiffly at 6 per cent. yesterday.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

War News Strengthens Home and Allied Securities.

LONDON, July 17.—The stock market continued its favorable course today. The news from the war theatre was still the chief influence toward the firmness of both home and allied securities, while Russian securities were further strengthened by the strong Financial Committee that has been formed and by developments in Russia. Oil, shipping, and Marconi stocks were active and higher.

Other sections of the market were quiet.

Trading Active on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, July 17.—Trading was active on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 61 francs 80 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 55 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Rates Continue to Rule at 6 Per Cent.—Market Unchanged.

There was no change yesterday in the market for money. Call loans commanded 6 per cent., the only rate that has been quoted for a fortnight. The situation in respect to time loans was also unchanged.

Today the third installment payment on the Third Liberty Loan, amounting to 35 per cent., is due and will be paid. There matures today a little more than $500,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness, dated April 22, and sold in anticipation of the Third Liberty Loan. The banks will today make transfers to the Federal Reserve Bank for the account of the Government, the remaining 60 per cent. of the proceeds of the first Fourth Liberty Loan certificate offering deposited with them.

The annual report of the Pennsylvania Company, a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which organized it as a holding concern to unify the operation and management of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh, was published yesterday. It operates, in all, ten subsidiaries of the Pennsylvania, comprising all its lines west of Pittsburgh except those included in the Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati & St. Louis, commonly called the "Pan Handle" Railroad.

The report of the Pennsylvania Company shows gross operating revenues for the calendar year 1917 of $78,595,298, an increase compared with 1916 of $3,026,272. Net operating revenues, however, fell off by $8,590,304, to a total of $15,847,398, owing to an increase of over $11,000,000 in operating expenses. The railway operating income was $11,317,760, a decrease of $9,002,965, and the net corporate income of $6,742,723 showed a loss of more than 50 per cent., or $7,452,563, for the year. The company pays a 6 per cent. dividend to the parent company.

Directors of the Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad Company, the other chief Western subsidiary of the Pennsylvania, yesterday declared a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent., payable July 25 to stock of record July 22, this representing a cut in the dividend from 5 to 4 per cent.

The Directors deferred action on June 26 on the semi-annual dividend because the company, having only come into existence as a corporate entity on Jan. 1, 1917, through the consolidation of a number of minor Pennsylvania subsidiaries, had no three-year record of earnings upon which to base a calculation of its return under the standard contract. The Railroad Administration, it appears, did not approve the payment of the full 2½ per cent. dividend, but authorized 2 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Railroad Security Owners Meet.

Members of the two active committees—the sub-committee of the Executive Committee and the special Protective Committee—of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities held an executive session yesterday afternoon at which, it was rumored, Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the association, presented his idea of a draft of substitute clauses for the railroad control contract, which would remove the objections urged by the association against the present form. S. Davies Warfield, President of the association, however, refused to say anything about the meeting, although he intimated that an announcement may be made after the meeting of the financial committee today.

B. & O. Rumors Denied.

There have been various rumors in the financial district lately that the Baltimore & Ohio was being compelled to contemplate some fairly extensive financing in the near future, figures being presented to prove that the road needed $22,000,000 at least. This is not in the least the view of the corporation management, however. It is not denied that the B. & O. will need money this Fall, when some $10,500,000 of short-term notes will fall due, among other things. But it has enough to take it through for several months, at least, and it is probable the Directors will not even take up the problem until the matter of the dividend has been settled.

A Question of Ethics.

Comment supplied by the Iron Age on one feature of the steel situation yesterday was interesting as touching on the shortage of steel for nonessential work. "Data are being gathered on which a question may be raised with the British Mission," this trade periodical said, "as to the nature and extent of British exports of steel. The Canadian steel trade is involved in a measure also. Some Canadian steel has been sold in New England at high prices to a nonessential industry, yet large shipments of American steel are being made to Canada at control prices. An amicable exchange on the whole question is possible, in view of the considerable amounts of American steel for which Great Britain has asked."

Meaningless Movements.

On a sale of 100 shares Lackawanna Steel stock advanced ¾ yesterday. Sales of 200 shares the day before brought a decline of a point. These transactions reflected something of the featureless movements which the stock list passed through, excepting a few issues selected by speculators for a try at a profit.

Gasoline Stocks and the Future.

Stocks of gasoline in the hands of refiners on April 30 amounted to approximately 500,000,000 gallons, according to a report by the Bureau of Mines. This seems like a sizeable amount, and the stability of prices for many months has proved that the pressure of demand has been comfortably met. Oil men hold, however, that it is not a promise of easy supplies for an indefinite period for the reason that consumption in the war may grow in the second half of the year to proportions far in excess of anything in the last four years. An increased output of gasoline reflects the expansion in the use of fuel oil, as the former is derived in the preparation of the latter product.

In the earlier German drives of the present campaign the City of Paris bonds reflected at times what appeared to be selling caused by the fear that the city might be captured. At 82¾ and 82⅞ this week the issue has maintained a steady tone constantly.

Some misunderstanding and confusion has been shown regarding the precise meaning of Section 4 of the Fourth Liberty Bond bill, which provides "that any incorporated bank or trust company designated as a depositary by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority conferred by Section 8 of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended by the Third Liberty Bond act, which gives security for such deposits as, and to amounts, by him prescribed, may, upon and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, act as fiscal agents of the United States in connection with the operations of selling and delivering any bonds, certificates of indebtedness, or War Savings Certificates of the United States." According to an official of the Treasury Department, this section contemplates that depositary banks should receive payment for Liberty bonds as agents of the United States rather than as agents of the subscribers. In order that the banks act as agents for the Government in the sale of Liberty bonds, they must become depositaries of public funds.

Joseph P. Grace, President of W. R. Grace & Co., has been elected a Director of the National City Company to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of John W. Sterling of the law firm of Shearman & Sterling. Mr. Sterling was also a Director of the National City Bank, but his successor on the board of the bank has not yet been announced.

Everybody on the cotton market for the last few days has been expecting the market to go up on the least excuse—at least everybody that could be found yesterday had. The market was heavily oversold; absorption had been general; in the nature of things crop news could not be better and might be worse. So everybody predicted that the market would go up. Yesterday the weekly weather report was the first unfavorable one, almost, this year. And everybody was right. The market did go up.

Favors to Men in the Service.

Officers of the army and navy have an advantage over their friends in civil life in respect to banking connections which they can make. The ordinary man of small means who desires to open a bank account would not dare to walk into the office of one of the big Wall Street institutions and ask that an account be opened for a small sum, for most of the larger banks require a minimum balance of $1,000, although some will consent to take $500 if the depositor happens to be a particular friend of an officer of the bank or the son of a large depositor. All these rules are ignored when it comes to men in military service. A Lieutenant or an ensign can walk into one of the biggest banks, and, upon proper identification, open an account, no matter how small his initial deposit. The fact that checks are drawn on a large bank is no longer an indication of the wealth of the drawer.

The British Check Tax.

On and after Sept. 1 the new stamp taxes will have to be paid in England on all bills of exchange and promissory notes. According to a statement recently made in the House, the number of checks, including dividend warrants, stamped in 1917-18 was about 321,600,000. The London Statist, in commenting on the payment of the tax, suggests the general adoption of the plan whereby shareholders with banking accounts will have their dividends credited to their accounts. "This is done very largely at the present time," says The Statist, which adds: "As we pointed out a few weeks ago, to the Exchequer's loss, for instead of thousands of dividend warrants being sent out, checks to about thirty or forty banks are all that are necessary in the case of those companies whose dividends are received by shareholders through their banks."

NEW BODY FRIENDLY TO BANK ASSOCIATION

200 BANKERS AT ST. LOUIS

Object to Organization and List of Officers and Executive Committee Made Public.

F. H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, returned yesterday from St. Louis, where he was elected Secretary of the newly formed United States Council of State Banking Associations, an organization which will represent exclusively the interests of State-chartered banks and trust companies. The membership of the council will consist of representatives of State banking associations in the various States, and its work will be restricted to serving the best interests of State institutions as distinguished from national banks.

In speaking of the new association Mr. Sisson put emphasis on the fact that its organizers were not hostile toward the long-established American Bankers' Association, which has a membership of 18,500 and representative of all classes of banking institutions in the United States. He pointed out that the new association had been formed at the suggestion of State Banking Superintendents and that it was thought that the organization was in a position to do more effective work in relation to legislation affecting State chartered institutions than were the trust companies and State bank sections of the American Bankers' Association.

The following resolutions, adopted at the convention held at St. Louis, express the objects and policies of the United States Council of State Banking Associations:

Whereas, the extraordinary conditions through which the world is now passing have developed new problems and greater responsibilities which must be met and and solved by the bankers of the United States; and fully realizing that the welfare of the nation can best be served by the fullest extension of both the national and State bank systems, neither system conflicting with the other, but each cooperating with and assisting the other in financing the war, in developing our natural resources, and in extending our commerce; therefore be it

Resolved, By the representatives of State banks, trust companies, and private banks, in association, assembled in the City of St. Louis, Mo., on July 15, 1918, as follows:

First—That we approve the call for this meeting, which was made by the Supervisors of State banks and trust companies.

Second—That we recommend that State banks, trust companies, private banks, and savings banks located in the several States form a State organization for the purpose of conserving and protecting those local privileges and interests which have been developed and become inherent in State financial institutions, and for the further purpose of securing such legislation as may be necessary to perfect the State banking systems.

Third—We recommend that such State bank sections of organizations co-operate with existing State bank organizations in so far as their interests do not conflict.

Fourth—It is not the purpose of this association to oppose or in any way antagonize the Federal Reserve system as at present constituted, but it is our desire to aid and assist the Federal Reserve Board in every way possible for the promotion of safe and sound banking.

Fifth—That this council co-operate with the American Bankers Association and the bankers' associations of the several States in all matters affecting banking interests, and it is not our purpose to withdraw in any way support from either of said associations.

Sixth—That we renew and redeclare our allegiance to Woodrow Wilson, the Commander in Chief of our army and navy. We pledge "all that we are and all that we have" to a victorious termination of the great conflict between mediaeval autocracy and the free people of the world. In our organized capacity we stand ready to respond in the future, as State banks have responded in the past, to every call made by our Government for either moral support or financial aid.

Seventh—That the Secretary of this association be and he is directed to forward a copy of these resolutions to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of the Treasury; also a copy to the President of the American Bankers Association, to the Presidents of the several State banking associations, and to the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Following are the officers of the council: President, W. H. Booth of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles; Vice Presidents—William Macferran of the State Savings Bank of Topeka, Kan., and George W. Rogers of the Bank of Commerce of Little Rock, Ark.; Secretary, F. H. Sisson of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and Treasurer, William B. Boulton of Morristown, N. J.

The Executive Committee consists of one representative from each of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts, as follows:

The St. Louis convention was attended by about two hundred bankers, thirty-three States being represented.

FREES ROOSEVELT FUND.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The foundation for Industrial Peace, created to administer the Nobel Peace Prize of $40,000 donated by Colonel Roosevelt, when he was President, will be formally dissolved tomorrow at a meeting of the Board of Trustees. Congress already has passed a resolution to dissolve the foundation at the suggestion of Colonel Roosevelt, who said that the money should not lie idle when it could be used for war relief. He asked for its return so that he might expend it through the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and other organizations. It was Colonel Roosevelt's intention that the fund be a nucleus for other gifts, but none ever was received and the income from $40,000 was not sufficient to carry out the original purposes of the foundation. The fund now amounts to $44,000, of which $6,000 is in Liberty Bonds.

PAPER STOCKS GOING DOWN

Trade Report Also Reports a Decrease in the Output.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Slight decreases in publishers and jobbers' stocks of news print paper were shown in the June report made public today by the Federal Trade Commission.

Publishers' stocks at the end of June amounted to 151,292 tons, and jobbers' stocks 9,444 tons. In the first six months of 1918 the output of standard news print was 50,602 tons less than in the corresponding period last year.

SHARP RISE IN PRICES ON COTTON MARKET

Net Gain of 22-55 Points on Heavily Oversold Condition and Unfavorable Crop News.

Combining a heavily oversold market with some unfavorable and official crop news in the weekly weather report yesterday produced, in the local cotton market, the not unnatural result of a sharp rise in prices, which at times made it look as though the shorts were in for a severe squeeze. This was particularly evident in July, which was bid up 35 points at the very opening, and closed at a net advance for the day of 55 points, leading the market all the way in everything but volume of business. The close was barely steady, with prices up from 22 to 55 points.

Not all the buying pressure, however, came from the short interests, though these were anxious enough, particularly when one or two stop-loss orders of substantial proportions were uncovered. At the occasional brief recessions it was noticed that representatives of spinners had some buying orders to execute, or were themselves hedging against substantial orders for forward delivery. This sufficed to provide a strong undertone and a substantial appearance to the advance, which reached its highest point in the last hour, and met only slight recessions under realizing at the close.

A feature of the market was the restoration of October to its position as unequivocal leader in trading activity, although the premium it held over December advanced only slightly. Apparently this was due to greater domestic trade demand, as compared with export buying, which, for reasons of transport, has favored the later months. It was both a broader and a more active market than has been seen in some days.

AGREE TO SUPPORT COTTON PRICE-FIXING

MAY INCLUDE ALL TEXTILES

Close co-operation with the Government in its program for price fixing of cotton goods was pledged yesterday by 300 representatives of the country's biggest dry goods jobbers at a special meeting of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association at the Waldorf-Astoria.

F. A. Patrick of F. A. Patrick & Co., Duluth, Minn., President of the association, urged manufacturers and jobbers—acting in the spirit of President Wilson's indorsement of general price fixing—to make sure that the ultimate consumer benefited from the prices to be named. Mr. Patrick stated that, in his belief, prices would be fixed on other cotton cloth fabrics in addition to the four lines already under Government regulation, and predicted that eventually official price fixing would include all textiles. He called for maximum co-operation on the part of all interests in the trade heartily to support the Government in its efforts to hold down prices during the period of the war.

John W. Scott, ex-President of the jobbers' association and Administrator of the Textile Division of the War Industries Board, said it was a matter of gratification to the Government that such a representative gathering had come to New York to consider the price fixing problem.

"It should be understood," Mr. Scott said, "that the policy of the War Industries Board is not to interfere with industries not associated with Government work. One of its chief aims is to stop speculation. Washington does not want policing of the trades, but it does ask for the co-operation of all. I think manufacturers do not feel they will be watched, although there may be some infractions, but they can't be helped. Don't make up your mind in advance that you can't conform with these things. Make up your mind to help."

Mr. Scott went on to say that price fixing was certain to affect practically all articles of which there was shown to be a scarcity. He also warned the jobbers that there was no question there would be a shortage in many lines. "If you take the lid off the consequences will be far worse than through price fixing," he concluded.

Gerrish H. Milliken, Chairman of the War Service Committee of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, said the question of price fixing came to a head in March, when the Government refused to pay the sharp advance made in cotton goods at that time. He said that it was imperative that the Government should get the goods it needs, and when it need them. Mr. Milliken pointed out that in the Spring the civilian trade started in to bid for goods wanted by the Government, whereupon the Government buyers stated that they would pay a higher price to the mills, provided the civilian trade benefited from the advance prices. The situation thus developed, he said, brought about the present price fixing program.

The speaker went on to say that the price-fixing committee of the War Industries Board was looking ahead to post bellum trade conditions in order to make certain that American prices on cotton goods were not so high as to injure domestic trade in the international trade rivalry expected by the Washington authorities. Mr. Milliken agreed with Textile Administrator Scott that it was not the Government's intent to upset business or reasonable profits, but rather to arrange it so that goods might be sold at prices which would allow business to continue.

Spencer Turner, head of the Cotton Goods Section of the War Industries Board, conceded that the Government's price-fixing program seemed to border on an infringement of the Sherman anti-trust law, but said a situation had arisen in the cotton fabric field where the law of supply and demand had ceased to work properly.

John V. Farwell, President of the John V. Farwell Company, Chicago, and Arthur C. Farley of Farley, Harvey & Co., Boston, responded in behalf of the nation's dry goods jobbing interests. Mr. Farwell told of the risks and uncertainties confronting the jobbers in the ensuing year, and insisted that in regulating prices the various phases of the situation should be taken into account. The Chicago merchant said that in a general way the jobbers would accept without complaint Government regulation of prices. Mr. Farley expressed the belief that the price-fixing of cotton fabrics was in good hands, and added that most jobbers welcome the Government's action.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 17,131 pkgs. The market not so snappy, but a generally steady holding and moderate trading. The call is particularly good for the undergrades, which are cleaning up closely. Renovated firm. Ladles and packing stock in sellers' favor. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 45½c@46½c; extras, (92 score,) 45c@45½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½c@44½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 41c@43c; thirds, 39c@40c; unsalted, higher than extras, 47c@47½c; extras, 46c@46½c; firsts, 44½c@45½c; seconds, 42c@44c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 44½c@45c; good to prime, 42c@44c; common to fair, 36c@41c; renovated, extras, 40c; firsts, 38½c@39½c; lower grades, 35c@37½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 36½c@37c; ladles, current make, firsts, 35c@36c; seconds, 33½c@34c; lower grades, 32c@33c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33½c@34c; No. 2, 33c; lower grades, 30c@32½c.

EGGS.—26,158 cases. Trading in the open market is a little sluggish, arrivals are fairly liberal and there is some surplus of average qualities which are not moving as well as last week. Strictly high grade eggs are generally held firmly and are meeting a fair demand, and there is continued good demand for good value underpriced stock, but eggs offering in range of 40c@43c move slowly. While the range of values is without quotable change, some lots have to go a little lower than they did a few days ago. Nearby white eggs of strictly fancy quality are comparatively scarce, and these are sustained; most of the supply shows more or less defects and have to go at easy prices, the demand being limited. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 46c; regular packed extra firsts, 44c@45c; regular packed firsts, 42c@43c; seconds and poorer, 37c@41c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 37c@38c; No. 2 and poorer, 32c@36½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 34c@35c; undergrades, 26c@33c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 52c@54c; ordinary to prime, 45c@51c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 43c@52c; Pacific Coast whites, firsts to finest, 50c@52c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 46c@48c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 47c@50c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 38c@46c; refrigerator firsts, charges paid, 41½c@42½c; seconds, charges paid, 37c@41c.

SEES LITTLE STEEL FOR NONESSENTIALS

AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY HIT

May Not Get More Than 25 Per Cent. of Normal Tonnage, Instead of 60 Per Cent. Asked For.

Considerable difference of opinion prevails among steel makers and the manufacturers of products made of steel as to the supplies which nonessential industries may expect in the closing months of the year. In some quarters evidence is detected that Government demands will absorb much more metal than had been expected when the war needs were made dominant over all other consumption. In others it is felt that the situation will tend to ease somewhat.

The former opinion presumably had its basis, in part, on information supplied to steel men at the meeting with the Director of Steel Supply, at the offices of the Steel Corporation on Monday. It received support yesterday in Washington dispatches, saying that the War Industries Board had held out small hope to automobile manufacturers of receiving more than 25 per cent. on their normal tonnage in the remainder of the year, instead of the 60 per cent. asked for.

"Washington has given no sign," the Iron Age says, "that ordinary consumers of steel will get larger allowances under the War Board's recent statement. Later checking of figures furnished by the Government and its allies really narrows the margin between probable output in the second half of the year and the requirements for war. Leading steel manufacturers up to this week have taken the view that the situation would be easier in a few months. They are less confident of that now.

"Actual procedure under the new classification of orders is not far from what has been followed. Some producers are even more exacting than before, now that they are asked by the Government to decide as to precedence in shipment.

"The meeting of the steel producers' committee and the Director of Steel Supply in New York Monday brought no conclusion as to steel rail and other pending prices. Only 100,000 tons additional of rails are wanted for this year, and the Railroad Administration wants the price fixed chiefly in view of large purchases to be made for 1919. The stand taken for a $42 price for Bessemer rails is in the face of an average cost of $50 or more, and the contention of one producer is that it should have $60 for Bessemer and $65 for open-hearth rails.

"A possible solution of the rail controversy is the payment of different prices to different mills in view of widely differing costs. This might be worked, seeing that the Government will take nearly all the output.

"The plate mills keep on producing at a yearly rate of 6,000,000 tons, a recent week showing 114,000 tons, while new capacity may bring the rate up to 7,000,000 tons a year by January."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"While tangible developments are few, the trend of expectations appears to be toward a situation of more liberal distribution. This revived talk has been due, in part, to the open authority recently given the mills by the Steel Director to ship small lots to any buyer without permit. It also is caused by growing convictions in some quarters that essential demands now in sight can be met by the mills as needed, and that there may be some to spare. It is pointed out that the factor of time when the material will be required for essential needs is all determining. Recent instances where shell steel production has been held back because forging operations have not been able to keep pace are cited."

Will Build $10,000,000 Tin Mills.

The American Tin Plate Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, will add twenty-four tin mills to its plant at Gary, Ind., according to an announcement made yesterday. The extension, which will cost about $10,000,000, is made necessary by the extraordinary demands of the Government for tin plate.

BETHLEHEM NOTES SOLD IN THREE DAYS

War Finance Board Will Be Required to Furnish No Part of $50,000,000 Issue.

HAD AGREED TO $20,000,000

$5,000,000 of Three-Year 7 Per Cent. Notes of Steel and Tube Co. of America Offered.

The syndicate managers for the $50,000,000 issue of 7 per cent. serial notes of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which were offered for public subscription on Monday morning, announced yesterday that all the notes had been sold. In the circumstances the War Finance Corporation will not be called on to supply the $20,000,000 which it agreed to furnish in the event that the bankers did not succeed in disposing of more than $30,000,000 of the notes. The Bethlehem Steel notes, maturing from one to five years, were offered at prices to yield from 7½ to 7¾ per cent.

The syndicate managers were the Guaranty Trust Company, the Bankers Trust Company, the Chase Securities Corporation and J. & W. Seligman & Co.

William A. Read & Co. are offering $5,000,000 of three-year, 7 per cent. secured convertible notes of the Steel & Tube Company of America at 97⅝ and interest, to net 7.80 per cent. The $5,000,000 of notes offered is part of an authorized issue of $7,500,000. The notes are a direct obligation of the company and are secured by pledge of $5,000,000 of its 7 per cent. Series A general mortgage sinking fund gold bonds, due July 1, 1943. The pledged bonds are secured by direct mortgage lien on the entire property of the company now owned or hereafter acquired. The three-year notes now offered are convertible at par into 7 per cent. Series A general mortgage sinking fund gold bonds due 1943.

The Steel & Tube Company of America is a large producer of steel tubular good and pig iron. Its funded debt including the notes now offered, amounts to $17,256,110. Profits in 1916 were in excess of $2,940,000 and in 1917 more than $3,645,000. Net profits for 1918 are estimated at $6,000,000.

A syndicate of bankers, headed by Lee, Higginson & Co., of New York and Boston, has purchased and will offer for public subscription $3,000,000 of four-year 7 per cent. notes of the Edison Electric of Boston. The offering price will be 99⅝, at which the yield is 7.10 per cent.

COMMERCE BOARD HEARINGS

To clearly define and establish a principle in tidewater demurrage tariffs, a problem of importance to coal dealers, as well as to the United States Railroad Administration, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday held a hearing at 244 Madison Avenue. Examiner Edward F. Spethman presided.

The principle which the commission seeks to establish is involved in a claim brought by the firm of Hite & Rafetto, coal dealers in New York, against the Central Railroad of New Jersey. It was asserted by the firm that a bill for $774 was presented to it by the railroad company, representing demurrage charges on coal cars which were delayed at Elizabethport, N. J., in February and March, 1916.

Another case heard yesterday by Examiner Spethman was that of the Aetna Explosives Company against the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad. This case was a suit to recover $9,042 paid by the Aetna Company to the railroad under protest, as storage charges on cars loaded with TNT and other high explosives. At the close of the hearing, at which witnesses appeared, briefs were ordered submitted to the commission.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Fractional declines were registered in security values at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final quotations were better than the low levels of the session, and the closing tone was steady. Trading, after the first hour, was restricted, and at times during the afternoon extremely dull. Speculative interest centred in the active industrials, with steel common again the dominant leader. Market operators, having discounted the good war news of Tuesday, were disposed to await more definite news of the great battle, and showed unwillingness to add to their obligations meanwhile.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Another investment deal on Front Street, where there has been unusual activity during the last six months owing to the increasing demand for loft space adjacent to the waterfront, was closed yesterday by the Charles F. Noyes Company.

The transaction involves 65 Front Street, a five-story and basement building, on a lot 20.7 by 87.6, which was sold by the Preferred City Real Estate Company. All cash was paid by the buyer, the property being held at $30,000.

The building is leased to Schwaetzer, Spitzen & Co. for a long term of years. Recently the sellers spent about $10,000 in adding an additional story to the building and reconstructing it throughout.

Two Loft Buildings Sold.

The Circle Warehouse Corporation purchased from Beck, Van Sicklen & Co., subject to a mortgage of $10,000, 84 Stanton Street, a seven-story factory building, on a plot 40 by 70, on the northwest corner of Mangin Street.

Tenement Sales.

Charles Schram sold to James H. Cruikshank the five-story double-flat at 73 East 109th Street, on a plot 29 by 100.11, assessed at $20,000. Leon S. Altmayer was the broker.

Salverio Robertisa sold to A. Caroldi 343 East 113th Street, a four-story tenement with stores and a three-story rear building, on a lot 16.8 by 100.11.

Porter & Co. sold to the Menard Realty Company the two four-story tenements with stores at 2,430 and 2,432 First Avenue. Property at Westbrook, Conn., was given in part payment.

Albert Keller Buys Long Island Waterfront Property.

August Janssen, operator, sold to Albert Keller, General Manager of the Ritz Carlton Hotel Company, a plot of land in Pine Island Park, Bayville, L. I., fronting 165 feet on the Sound; 484 feet on Jackson Avenue, 504 feet on Quincy Avenue, and 200 feet on Bayville Avenue. Also, a triangular plot of land fronting eighty-five feet on Bayville Avenue, 137 feet on Ludlam Avenue, and 135 feet on Jackson Avenue.

The plot is situated at the junction of Oyster Bay Boulevard and the road to Centre Island and is considered one of the finest beach properties in that section. Mr. Keller purchased for future development.

Pays $80,000 for Island Summer Home.

Nivovin Island, lying off Meads Point, Greenwich, Conn., has been sold by E. G. Dieckerhoff to Mrs. John Hemming Fry for $80,000.

Investor Buys Kingsbridge Block Front.

Bronx Sales.

Brooklyn.

The John Pullman Real Estate Company sold 197 Sixth Avenue, on the Park Slope, a three-story dwelling on a lot 20 by 100, for Carol C. Doepker to Samuel Juskowitz for occupancy.

I. Salzberg sold for P. Fiebiger to H. Barnett the corner plot 80 by 100 feet, on the southeast corner of Forty-fifth Street and Twelfth Avenue.

I. Salzberg sold for Charles J. Fox to I. Birnbaum the one-family cottage on a plot 60 by 100 feet, on the north side of Forty-ninth Street, 280 feet west of Fourteenth Avenue.

In the Bay Ridge section Frank H. Malone sold for the H. J. Wolf Construction Company the two-family brick dwelling with garage, now in the course of construction, on the north side of Eighty-second Street, 275 feet east of Fourth Avenue, to a client for occupancy.

MAYOR RUNS FIRST LEXINGTON AV. TRAIN

INTERBORO READY TO POOL

City May Gain Nothing by Advancing Date of Contract Because of High Operating Costs.

With the opening of the Lexington Avenue subway yesterday between Forty-second Street and 167th Street came the announcement by the Public Service Commission that an effort was to be made to put into effect on Aug. 1 the pooling system between the city and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company under which the city would begin immediately to reap a share in the earnings of both the new and old subway lines operated by the company. Under the dual contracts the lines were not to be pooled until the Old Slip-Clark Street tunnel under the East River was completed, and the nearest estimated date for its completion is next January.

It was said yesterday that the company was willing to agree to a modification of the contract so that the pooling arrangement could go into effect at once, and it is expected that the Board of Estimate will also consent because the Mayor recently intimated that work on the tunnel was being delayed so that the company could take for a longer time the full subway profits.

Last year the Interborough Company earned about $7,000,000 net from subway operation. Deducting the preferential of $6,350,000 from this amount left a profit of about $650,000. If the pooling arrangement had been in operation then the city would have received half of this amount. It was suggested that the willingness of the company to hasten the pooling of the profits was due to the increased costs of operation, which might wipe out the profit so that it would lose nothing by its concession.

In a statement made yesterday by a representative of the commission this explanation was made:

"The receipts from the old subway and those from the new will be placed in a common pool, and therefrom will be deducted taxes, maintenance, operating expenses, depreciation, the company's preferential and interest and sinking fund payments upon the city's and the company's investments in the new lines. After these charges have been paid the amount of revenue remaining will be divided equally between the city and the operating company. It is, therefore, believed that the sooner 'initial' operation commences the better it will be for the city, because it brings nearer the time when the city will share in the profits of the dual system."

At noon yesterday a six-car train left the diagonal station at Forty-second Street with many public officials on board and ran through the Lexington Avenue subway with Mayor Hylan acting as the motorman. It was a return for a short time to his old trade of engine driver except that the power was electricity instead of steam. Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Interborough Company, gave the signal and the train moved smoothly toward the north, passing the 125th Street station nine and a half minutes later. Nothing untoward marred the trip, and while George A. Waidler, a regular motorman, kept an eye on the Mayor, he had nothing to do but to offer the Mayor his congratulations.

Under the Harlem River the train was brought to a quick stop in order to test the signal and braking system.

Among those in the train were Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the Public Service Commission; Commissioners Whitney and Hubbell, composing the commission's special committee on the "H" system; the commission's Secretaries, James Blaine Walker and Frank N. Robinson; Alfred Craven, the commission's consulting engineer; several other engineers, many of the officials of the Interborough Company, Frank Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen; George McAneny, former President of the board; Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, and William McCarroll, former Public Service Commissioner.

It was stated that connection between the new and old subway at Times Square and the Grand Central station will be made about Aug. 1. This work will have to be done during the night hours when traffic is at its lowest ebb. It was first planned to have through service begin early on a Sunday morning, but the engineers have so arranged things that trains will not be held up for more than from thirty to forty-five minutes. At a designated hour, of which notice will be given, all traffic on the subway lines will stop. Then the old tracks south of Forty-second Street will be connected with the new Lexington Avenue tracks and the new tracks under Seventh Avenue will be connected at Times Square with the old tracks running north from that point. Then the present tracks through Forty-second Street will be used only for a shuttle service.

The new service through Lexington Avenue will be only local until the through service is possible. Because of the narrowness of the avenue the tracks are double decked. Those used for local service are above the express tracks. Stations on the line are at Fifty-first, Fifty-ninth, Sixty-eighth, Seventy-seventh Eighty-sixth, Ninety-sixth, 103d, 110th, 116th, and 125th Streets in Manhattan. The station at Mott Haven is the only new one opened in the Bronx. North of that point trains began running last year. The new line is six and a quarter miles in length and cost, including equipment, $58,800,000. Service for the public began at 2 o'clock.

The Public Service Commission again asked that something be printed urging patrons of the trunk lines to take the line that will carry them home without the necessity of changing at Times Square or the Grand Central Station. It was pointed out that to transfer at such congested points contained an element of danger and caused delay in the running time of trains.

Public Service Commissioner Whitney said of the service the new line would render the public:

"It will afford rapid transit facilities in a part of Manhattan that has been impatiently anticipating additional service for many years. Evidence of this is shown in the extraordinary building of apartment houses costing many millions, along Park, Madison, and Lexington Avenues. The tenants of these buildings, until today, have had to depend upon trolley lines to take them to Forty-second Street, where they could get the subway. This new subway will also be of the greatest convenience to the Bronx.

"With today's operation the old subway will be supplemented by the shuttle service now in operation under Seventh Avenue from Times Square south. The real relief, however, will come with the full operation of the 'H,' which will probably be on Aug. 1. This involves the necessity on the part of the Interborough Company of filling out its operating force, for the 'H' lines will require approximately 1,000 employes in addition to those needed for the old lines. Within a month operation may be begun on the Lexington Avenue line through 138th Street and Southern Boulevard to the Hunt's Point Station. This spur will tap that part of the Bronx which has now no rapid transit service."

SAYS SURFACE ROADS SEEK FEDERAL CONTROL

In an article written for The Survey by William L. Ransom, chief counsel for the Public Service Commission, the statement is made that the surface railroad companies are responsible for the action taken by the National War Labor Board, which is expected to result in an increase in the rate of fares, and that the clamor raised by the companies was due to a desire to "escape a day of reckoning and readjustment."

"The big advances in railroad rates," he wrote, "have whetted appetites. The street railway companies seek a way of getting the same thing without being embarrassed by State suggestions for public protection. They know that Federal action would sweep franchises, contracts, commission orders, State laws, and decisions of State courts into the discard, for at least the period of the war. Can you blame them for trying to get away with it?"

Mr. Ransom says that through all of the proceedings of the National War Labor Board the voice of the great public has been strangely silent and unrepresented, and that "the novelty of the mechanisms set up for dealing with wartime problems and the diffidence which men feel about questioning anything urged as 'necessary for winning the war' have, perhaps, combined to leave unrepresented before this tribunal the interests and the views of the rank and file of those who must pay increased fares out of household budgets already cramped and curtailed."

He wrote that the problems of intracity transportation should be faced in a courageous and statesmanlike way and that "lines and portions of lines which are no longer necessary or desirable should be abandoned, and not continued as drains upon the resources of the systems. In many instances rail lines on the surface are obsolete, and should give way to improved or more economical facilities."

Mr. Ransom thinks that municipalities should consider the question of fare increases in a broad-minded way, and not refuse to permit them just because they have the power to refuse. In conclusion, his article says:

"The pendulum has swung; the fates have favored the public interest, if only the power is sanely and evenhandedly used. Old franchises, granted in reckless disregard of public rights as to duration, terms, and the like, may now be put upon a fair, modern social basis. The companies which ask public authorities to modify the fare provisions of franchise contracts will doubtless recognize the propriety of municipal insistence upon other changes in the public interest."

Amnesty for Ernesto Madero.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 17.—Word has been received here that amnesty has been granted to Ernesto Madero and Pedro Lascuerain by President Carranza of Mexico. They were formerly members of the Madero Cabinet, but did not assist Carranza in his fight against Huerta. Since then Ernesto Madero has acted as fiscal agent for Villa in New York, and recently was indicted in that city in connection with the bankruptcy of the firm of Madero Brothers. Lascuerain was Minister of Foreign Affairs under Madero, and was President ad interim until Huerta took office.

MACHINISTS STRIKE; HAMPER WAR WORK

10,000 Quit in 100 Plants in and About Newark—Many Engaged on Government Jobs.

DEMAND AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Ask a Wage Rise of from 10 to 15 Cents an Hour, and Time and a Half for Overtime.

More than 10,000 machinists, toolmakers and other members of the machinists' union are out on strike in Newark and its vicinity. More than 100 factories are affected. Many of these are engaged on Government work entirely. The Newark Bay shipyards are not affected.

The strike was ordered yesterday morning. The delegates in the various shops were instructed by Harvey W. Brown, business agent, to present their demands for salary increases and an eight-hour day, and if not granted to walk out. Only a few places gave in. According to Mr. Brown, more than 300 factories, employing from half a dozen to 500 machinists, are affected. He says the number of men out is 15,000. Arthur M. Torrey, Secretary of the Employers' Association of Northern New Jersey, says that number is greatly exaggerated, and that many of the shops were able to continue work, having made preparations for just such an emergency.

The strike has been threatening for more than two months. Two weeks ago the union voted to go on strike, but at the last minute called it off. It was announced that representatives of the War Department and Department of Labor asked for time to investigate local conditions. John A. Moffitt and J. J. S. Rodgers of the Department of Labor were sent on to Newark, but failed to bring about a satisfactory agreement between the union and employers. It was said that the firms, which are members of the Employers' Association, refused to treat with the unions.

The demands of the men include an eight-hour day, with time and one-half for overtime, and double time for Sundays and holidays. Eighty-five cents an hour is asked for the toolmakers; machinists, 75 cents; specialists, 65 cents, and machinists' helpers, 50 cents. These rates mean an increase of 15 cents an hour for the first three trades and 10 cents for machinists' helpers.

Work on Government Contracts.

Some of the larger shops affected, many of which are working 100 per cent. on Government contracts, are: Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and Splitdorf Company of Newark, Hyatt Roller Bearing Company, Crucible Steel Company, General Electric Company, New Jersey Tube Company, Otis Elevator Company, and Henry R. Worthington Company of Harrison, International Arms and Fuse Company of Bloomfield, Standard Tool Company of Arlington, and Crocker-Wheeler Company of East Orange.

In some of the plants laborers joined the machinists in the walkout. This condition prevailed at the Crucible plant in Harrison. C. W. Curtiss, general manager of the Splitdorf plant, said the strike was a surprise to him, as the Shop Committee practically agreed on a settlement of the difficulties Tuesday. The union men say no agreement was reached; that the firm, although agreeing on some of the demands, refused to make the increases retroactive to June 1, and that a flat rate was denied because it was held that some of the men were more competent than others.

Mr. Curtiss said that 90 per cent. of the work being done by his company was for the Government and the Allies, and added, that a number of the strikers had received exemption from military duty for the reason that they were engaged on important war work. If the men continue to remain away from work, he said, the selective service boards which granted the exemptions will be notified.

The demand for men of the trades affected is so great that it is feared by some of the manufacturers that many of the strikers will leave the city. Representatives from concerns in other parts of the country are seeking machinists and tool makers at the Federal-State-Municipal Employment Bureau. They gave assurances that they will not go among the men to get them to take positions, but will receive applications from the men. The strikers have been admonished by their leaders to remain quiet, and for the greater part of yesterday afternoon the men attended a mass meeting held in West Side Park.

HALTS AT NAME OF HYLAN.

Magistrate Refuses Summons When He Sees Mayor on Boxing Program.

Magistrate Frothingham in Yorkville Police Court denied an application for a summons yesterday against the promoters and contestants in the big boxing exhibition staged at Madison Square Garden Tuesday night for the benefit of the United States Army Athletic Equipment Fund when he read the name of Mayor John F. Hylan in the list of the Honorary Committee on a program submitted to him in court.

"Was Mayor Hylan present?" Magistrate Frothingham asked Patrolman Patrick D. Keneally of Inspector Dolan's squad, who made the request for the summons.

"I don't know. He might have been," the policeman answered.

"Inasmuch as the Mayor is the chief executive of the city, and he might have been present, I refer you to him," said the Magistrate.

Among others mentioned in the Honorary Committee on the program were United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, Charles Dana Gibson, Harrison Fisher, and Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft. The Executive Committee names included Charles J. Harvey, Joe Humphries, and Billy Gibson.

The Inspector's man asked for the summons on the ground that it was a violation of Section 1710, penal law, prohibiting boxing.

Assistant District Attorney Direnzo, attached to the Yorkville Court, informed Magistrate Frothingham when the application was made that Magistrate McGeehan had dismissed a similar complaint against an affair at the Garden several weeks ago.

The management of the exhibition had a Supreme Court injunction curtailing police interference. The injunction is returnable before Justice McAvoy today.

SUNK IN NORTH ATLANTIC.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 17.—News was brought here today by the officers wegian sailing ship Marosa, 1,182 tons, wegian sailing shpi Marosa, 1,1882 tons, had been sunk by a German submarine on July 8 about 1,200 miles east of Sandy Hook, and that her crew of twenty-two men had been landed yesterday at Canso, Nova Scotia.

The first report of the sinking of the vessel was brought here two days ago by the Captain of a British transport who heard the gunfiring and got away at top speed by zigzagging. He was only two hours away from the Marosa, but did not get the name of the ship in the message he picked up. According to the distress call the Marosa was in 50 degrees north latitude and 50 west longitude, which is about 250 miles east of the position where the Norwegian bark Manx King was captured by a submarine on July 6. Officers of the bark who reached this port three days ago said that the first thing the German seamen did when they went on board the bark was to rig a wireless apparatus between her fore and main masts to be operated from storage batteries. It was probable, they thought, that the Manx King might be armed and used as a raider.

The Marosa sailed from this port on June 22 bound for Pernambuco, Brazil, with a cargo of coal under charter by Corey Brothers, who said that they could not understand why the Captain of the bark had sailed up so far north out of his course to the port of destination.

Shipmasters explained that sailing vessels leaving North Atlantic ports for South America frequently steered north as far as the coast of Newfoundland to avoid bucking the strong current of the Gulf Stream, and later picked up favorable trade winds which carried them southward.

ARMY OFFICERS ON TRIAL.

Frank S. O'Neil, ex-State Boxing Commissioner, and Second Lieutenants Oswald L. Simpson and Leonard L. Mitchell of the United States Army were put on trial before Judge Martin T. Manton in the Federal District Court yesterday on a charge of conspiracy to obtain the release of draft registrants for pay.

A jury was quickly obtained, and Geo. M. Curtis, the prosecutor, in his opening address, said the Government would seek to prove that the defendants led fathers and other relatives to believe that O'Neil could have registrants discharged because of his "pull with army officers." Mr. Curtis said that O'Neil accepted money to get men of draft age appointed to clerical jobs in the Quartermaster's Corps, and accepted $600 from Herman Schneider to get his son, Samuel, out of the service, and $800 from Philip Honig for the discharge of a relative.

"Samuel Schneider," said Mr. Curtis, "is now in the trenches in France."

Mr. Curtis showed the jury receipts and promissory notes which are alleged to have passed in the transactions with O'Neil.

Abraham Honig, the first witness, said he had mentioned the fact that his brother Philip had been drafted to a man named Reuchback, and that Reuchback suggested that he see O'Neil, who, according to Reuchback, had succeeded in getting Reuchback's brother-in-law out of the service. Accordingly, Honig said he called on O'Neil to get his brother transferred from the fighting division at Yaphank to the Quartermaster's Corps. He said he paid O'Neil $800 to have his brother transferred, and that O'Neil introduced him to Lieutenants Mitchell and Simpson, and that the officers informed him that they knew his brother Philip and that he was in good hands.

Emanuel Bullard, a lawyer of 455 Bedford Avenue, Richmond Hill, and his wife, Mrs. Louise Bullard, were acquitted last night in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, after a four-day trial on an indictment alleging an attempt to defeat the purposes of the selective service law. The charge grew out of the failure of their son Lawrence to register for the draft. Mr. Bullard testified that Lawrence was born in December, 1896, in East Orange, and, rebutting this, United States District Attorney Buckner produced a birth certificate showing that Lawrence was born in 1895 at 25 West Ninety-ninth Street, Manhattan. Mr. Bullard's attorney, proving that his client had made an honest mistake, submitted a copy of "Who's Who," printed in 1909, in which Lawrence's birth year was given as 1896.

Both testified that they had had no intention of seeking to have the boy evade the draft. According to the Federal authorities, the whereabouts of the son has not been known since last September.

SUBWAY TRAIN DERAILED.

Noon Traffic from Fourteenth Street to the Bridge Held Up.

A local Interborough subway train jumped the track at the City Hall loop about noon yesterday and local service south of Fourteenth Street was held up for two hours. Shuttle trains were operated between Fourteenth Street and the Brooklyn Bridge, and southbound locals were switched over to the northbound tracks at Fourteenth Street until normal traffic was resumed.

At the time officials of the Interborough were attending the opening of the new Lexington Avenue subway and they knew nothing of the matter until they had returned to their offices.

Receiver for Atlantic City Gas Co.

TRENTON, N. J., July 17.—Federal Judge Davis, on the application of Bertha E. Patterson of Pittsburgh, a bond holder, who alleged that the Atlantic City Gas Company is insolvent, appointed today Harvey F. Carr of Camden, receiver. The bond for the receiver was fixed at $100,000. Edward G. Mooney of Ventnor City, a shareholder, joined in the suit. It is alleged the company has issued securities of $1,600,000 over the value of its property.

EATON SURVIVORS LANDED.

LONDON, July 17.—Thirty-five Americans, constituting the crew of the former Great Lakes steamer George L. Eaton, have arrived in London. Their steamer foundered at sea in a storm. They got away in the lifeboats, were rescued some time later by a warship, and were brought to London.

The George L. Eaton was laden with general cargo, and was bound for France. The members of the crew lost most of their belongings, but they were completely reoutfitted on their arrival in London by the American Red Cross, which had a truckload of supplies at the dock waiting for them. Each man received a complete outfit of clothing and a comfort bag containing toilet articles, &c.

These comfort bags were manufactured at workrooms in Fifth Avenue, New York, and brought a welcome touch of home to the shipwrecked men. Each sailor also received two weeks' supply of tobacco, including cigarettes.

The men are billeted by the British Shipwrecked Sailors' Society here. They will take new berths on merchant ships as soon as the necessary formalities are completed.

How France Has Been Fed

"Before the war, a distinguished French Officer, General Maitrot, wrote a series of articles in the 'Echo de Paris' to warn France, that in case of war, the French meat industry would be unable to supply the French army in the field with fresh meat,—owing especially to the lack of modern refrigerating plants and of refrigerating transportation,—and too, owing to the deficiency in the national herd."

"Since the war began, the French army has never been short of fresh meat, thanks mainly to the prosperous condition of the American meat industry, and too, to the American live stock breeders."

The foregoing statement was made by a representative of the Allies now in the United States.

"that the American packers have been of the greatest possible assistance to the Allies and have, by their efficient cooperation, contributed in the utmost degree to the successful prosecution of the war."
